Legion Post Holds Annual Meeting, Elects Officers

Eugene B. Carey Elected Commander of American Legion Post—All Officers to be Installed in January—Auxiliary Also Elects Officers—Annual Reports Submitted.

The annual meeting of Kingston Post, No. 150, American Legion, was held Friday evening at the city court chambers in the city hall. The meeting was very largely attended and considerable enthusiasm was shown throughout the meeting and during the election of officers. By-laws which involve important changes were adopted as printed in "Our Own Number," the official paper of the Post.

One of the outstanding features of the election of officers was the unanimous selection of the Post of Adjutant Eugene B. Carey as commander to succeed George Potter whose term expired. The by-laws as adopted provide for the annual election in August in the future instead of in December and also the election of three trustees, one to be elected each year hereafter.

After the annual reports of the retiring officers had been read and accepted the matter of election of officers was taken up.

Appreciate Carey's Work.

Conrad J. Heiselmann, who placed Eugene B. Carey in nomination, was met with continued applause and Mr. Carey was unanimously elected, the commander casting a unanimous vote of the Post for his election. Mr. Carey has been adjutant of the Post for seven years and during that time has devoted a great part of his time to the work which involved the many difficulties which ex-service men experienced shortly after being released from service. There were insurance papers to prepare and in many cases there was difficulty in getting papers in proper form. There were also bonus applications, adjusted compensation papers and medals to be given out, all of which involved a great deal of work. Mr. Carey met these problems with a spirit of enthusiasm and pep which every member of the Legion well knows and his election as commander met with the approval of the entire organization.

Other Officers Elected.

Edward J. Leudtke, Morton J. Fince and Walter C. Carver were elected vice commanders. There was but one name placed in nomination for adjutant, that of Eugene Cornwell who was elected unanimously. The retiring commander, George W. Potter, was elected treasurer and the Rev. Francis M. O'Reilly was elected chaplain. Thomas F. Coughlin was elected service officer, George Davis was elected quartermaster and Conrad J. Heiselmann was elected Post historian. Peter Keresman was elected athletic officer and Raymond Boss, sergeant-at-arms.

Three trustees were elected, Dr. Fred Snyder for three years, Charles T. Dixon for two years and William A. McBride for one year.

Editor-in-chief of "Our Own Number," Andrew J. Murphy, who will appoint his assistants.

A committee was appointed to confer with the members of the Auxiliary in regard to arrangements for a meeting in January when the newly elected officers will be installed.

Want Site for German Gun.

The matter of where the German gun which has been assigned to Kingston Post as a trophy is to be placed was also discussed. There is not sufficient room on the Post property on West O'Reilly street at the memorial building and a committee was named to confer with the city officials and see if the gun cannot be placed on city property until such time as the Post can care for it. The Post will assume all responsibility for up-keep and maintenance of the captured gun while it is on city property. The suggestion was made that it be placed temporarily in Academy Park.

Auxiliary Also Elects Officers.

The members of the Auxiliary met at the same time the Post met and elected the following officers:

President, Mrs. Herman I. DuBois; treasurer, Mrs. William A. McBride; secretary, Miss Alberta Carey; vice-presidents, Miss Margaret McMahon, Mrs. George W. Potter and Mrs. C. J. Heiselmann.

Adjutant's Report.

Adjutant Eugene B. Carey submitted the following report:

To the Members of Kingston Post, No. 150, American Legion.

Gentlemen and Comrades:

I have the honor and pleasure to submit herewith my sixth annual report as adjutant of Kingston Post. The sixth year of our existence is about to be recorded in the annals of history and it well resembles the painting of a beautiful picture or the grandeur of a setting sun. Years ago we established and have carried forward successively an unblemished reputation, an unblemished character, which has been added to the year about to close. Should you want proof of these words look to the American Legion Memorial Building on West O'Reilly street. It is a monument to our service and our standing in the hearts of the citizens of Kingston and Ulster county.

Deny Rehearing In Oil Case

Washington, Dec. 19.—Without assigning any reason, the United States court of appeals today denied the application of Albert B. Fall, ex-secretary of the interior, and E. L. Doheny, Sr., and E. L. Doheny, Jr., for a rehearing of the appeal they made from the recent decision sustaining bribery indictments against them in connection with the Elk Hills naval oil lease.

The indictments, charging bribery and corruption, were quashed by a federal court, and later the court of appeals reversed the decision, reinstating the indictments. Today's decision merely affirmed the reversal of the lower court's opinion.

Find Children in Need of Clothes

Mrs. Lois Gray, child welfare nurse of the Junior League, in making her many visits throughout the city, has found a number of families where children are destitute of warm clothing for the winter. The Junior League will continue to supply layettes for babies but can use any warm clothing for children of preschool age, and families who have clothing that while still in good condition has been outgrown by their children will confer a favor and supply a real need by leaving the clothing at the city hall where it will be distributed where most needed by Mrs. Gray.

Colonel House has only recently returned from Europe, and it is understood he is giving President Coolidge the benefit of his observations abroad, particularly with regard to the League of Nations proposed disarmament conference.

ACROBAT WORKED WITH AN INJURED LEG AT ORPHEUM

Friday afternoon while one of the vaudeville teams at the Orpheum Theater was doing an acrobatic act the male member of the team, who were booked under the name of Violet and partner, landed on his injured foot and fainted from the pain. He had injured his foot before reaching Kingston and had applied some kind of acid in the hope of curing it, but instead it burned his foot severely. He had been working but five minutes when he alighted on the foot. Manager Sherry did not know at the time that the acrobat had an injured leg or he would have arranged for another act to replace it that day.

Flemming Chosen On Debating Team

Arthur Flemming Will Go To California To Meet Pacific Coast Schools, On Ohio Wesleyan University Debating Team.

Delaware, Ohio, Dec. 19.—Arthur Flemming, 295 West Chestnut street, Kingston, has been selected as a member of the Ohio Wesleyan University debating team which will go to California to meet five representative Pacific coast schools during the last of January and the first of February.

Whittier, University of Southern California, University of California and Drake University will be debated upon the subject "Resolved that the present policy to extend governmental restriction of individual liberty should be condemned." The Ohio Wesleyan debaters will uphold the affirmative of "Resolved, that democracy is a mistaken idea" against Occidental College. Against Redlands the Ohio Wesleyan debaters will argue the negative of the question, "Resolved, that the federal amendment regulating child labor should be adopted."

The Ohio Wesleyan debating team upon which Flemming has been placed has also been selected to represent Ohio Wesleyan University in a debate with Denison University January 14 and in a debate with Wooster College, which is to be held upon a neutral floor at Cleveland, January 15. The Wooster-Ohio Wesleyan debate is a part of an annual triangular contest between Wooster, Western Reserve and Ohio Wesleyan.

The Ohio Wesleyan team upon which Flemming has been named will be the first team in the history of the university to make an extended debating touring of the western states. No Ohio Wesleyan team has ever before gone to the Pacific coast.

Eight Names for C. of C. Directors

There will be eight names on the final ballot for directors of the Chamber of Commerce this year instead of the usual six. This is because on the return from the preliminary voting the four low men are tied, making it necessary to place the four names on the ballot.

Secretary Coe in reporting the results of the balloting, wishes to call to the attention of the members and those interested to the fact that each member has had opportunity of placing in nomination the names of those he thinks most fitted to serve the community in that capacity. The tellers' report shows that the following named parsons received the highest number of votes for nomination as directors:

Arthur A. Davis.
E. Frank Flanagan.
Chester A. Baltz.
Morris Samter.
Walter P. Crane.
W. C. Kingman.
M. J. Michael.
W. H. Rudderham.

The total number of ballots cast was 109, each ballot carrying three names suggested as the choice of the member voting. In addition to those named by the tellers as receiving the most votes 95 other names were offered.

The names appearing in the tellers' report will be submitted to the membership within a few days in the final election and the members are earnestly requested to make their wishes known at that time.

Courant a box of products of the south, consisting of grapefruit, oranges, pineapples, cocoanuts, tangerines, sugar cane and pecan nuts. All arrived in first rate condition. This is the second box of fruit Mr. Peters has received since the arrival of Mr. and Mrs. Courant in the south.

The Imp. Wiz Has Arrived

And the Lamp Still Holds Out to Burn for All Except Two—Dr. Whaley Moves on and a New Kleagle Is to Be Appointed.

The newly organized branch of the Independent Klan of America will meet in their hall at Ulster Park on Monday evening, at which time another large class of members will be initiated. Anyone who has paid the $10 membership fee and joined the K. K. K. at any time is eligible to membership in the Independent Klan of America without the payment of any initiation fee.

Meanwhile Ulster county is the most conspicuous spot in the Invisible Empire, largely due to the growth of the I. K. A. and the doings of Kleagle Whaley. Imperial Wizard Evans has come all the way from Atlanta to apply the salve and offer amnesty. Probably while here he will see that a new Kleagle is appointed in place of Dr. Whaley, who has passed on to greener fields, if such there be, after making Ulster county very near to being the banner county in the state. Before leaving Kingston Dr. Whaley said the I. K. A. in Ulster county were Bolsheviks.

Kleagle and Deputy Sheriff the Rev. Dr. K. Jeffries Whaley, badge, gun, sheet and pillow case and all, have gone to Wellsville, Allegany county, a village of 4,000 population in a county of 40,000 population, and a new Kleagle is to be appointed for Ulster county. There are several aspirants, at least two of them with previous experiences. One did Kleagling in New Jersey before coming to Ulster county and the other Kleagled here during an interval when there was no duly anointed and ordained Kleagle on the job. Grand Dragon Smith has visited the county and in an address at Alligerville announced that the light still holds out to burn for all mutineers who repent at once To this general amnesty there are two exceptions—the erstwhile Exalted Cyclops and the former secretary for the county have been "banished" for all time and it is for them a "doleful day in the wailing month of the frightful year" forevermore. Never again may they be among those robed in white who gather around the throne to fight the adversary and preserve 100 per cent Americanism, as prescribed in the Book of Revelations.

Strange to say, both of the "banished" grin, when they do not laugh right out aloud, and assert that they don't give a whoop in hades for the Imperial Wizard, the Grand Dragon, Great Titan, Grand Goblin or anyone else in the K. K. K. since they joined the I. K. A., which stands for and practices in all purity and with great zeal the principals which the K. K. K. "pretends to profess."

Kleagle Whaley's commission as deputy sheriff was not revoked. Whether the new Kleagle will be added to the list of deputy sheriffs has not yet been announced.

New Revenue Bill Passed by House

Washington, Dec. 19.—The $325,000,000 tax reduction bill, passed by the house in record time and by a record vote, went to the senate today where it will not receive such speedy attention or respect as the house accorded it.

Numerous amendments are planned for it in the senate, and the most sanguine supporters do not expect it to emerge in final form until early March. It will be the aim, however, to get it through by March 15, the date on which the returns are due from 1925 incomes.

Only 25 votes were cast against the bill in the house, as against the overwhelming total of 390 in its favor. The opposition was furnished by the Republican insurgents and a handful of Democrats all of whom contended that it was "a rich man's tax bill," and did not give the "little fellow" a proportionate cut.

Cassidy of Hurley avenue and John Gadd of 264 Washington avenue, who recently went to Florida for the winter, have written home to their parents that they made the trip in good order in three days and that both are prospering. The former is representing an automobile concern and the latter a manufacturer of adding machines. They announce having met Mr. and Mrs. Grover Lasher of Kingston who report finding conditions very satisfactory and that they expect to stay until the latter part of March next year.

Lawyers Shun Industrial Job

Governor Smith Unable to Find Attorney Who Will Take Chairmanship of State Industrial Commission—Vast Amount of Work Given as Reason.

Albany, Dec. 19.—Governor Smith has an $8,000 a year appointment at his disposal to which he would like to name a lawyer, but he is having a hard time trying to find an attorney who will take the job.

The post of chairman of the state industrial commission became vacant some time ago when John O. Higgins of Oswego, resigned. Since then the executive has been making a futile effort to find a lawyer of the right kind to take the position.

According to friends of the governor he is going to keep on trying to find a lawyer for the job for a few more days and then if he is not successful he will appoint a layman.

Mayor John H. Walrath of Syracuse, who goes out of office the first of the year, could have the position for the asking but he doesn't want it, according to reports going the rounds at the capitol today.

Mayor Walrath, who called on the governor this week, would like to be appointed chairman of the state motion picture censorship commission to succeed George Cobb of Watertown, according to political gossip at the capitol. While the governor is said to have a high regard for Mr. Walrath's ability, and believes he could fill the post as head of the movie commission, it was declared nothing would be done about Cobb's successor until the governor finds out just what is going to happen to the commission under the reorganization plans. Cobb's term of office expires the last day of this month.

The reason so many lawyers are keeping shy of the appointment as chairman of the industrial commission is because of the vast amount of work which would fall upon their shoulders in that position. It is not unusual, it was said, to have the chairman of the industrial board work anywhere from eight to 12 hours a day. This is caused by the thousands of claims filed by injured workmen under the compensation law.

The governor, is was said today, would like to see the next legislature enact a law increasing the number of members of the industrial board.

WDBZ on the Air Next Tuesday

Station WDBZ will resume broadcasting on Tuesday evening, December 22, according to announcement made Friday afternoon during a test of the newly strengthened equipment. Announcer Nesslage stated during the test that the station was operating on 50 watts and might later go to 100 watts. Its licensed power when in operation last winter was five watts. During the test a report of good reception was received from Poughkeepsie. In Kingston the volume and clarity seemed considerably better than when only five watts were used although, fortunately, volume is not increased proportionately to the increased power. The distance reached should, however, be much greater.

There was no difficulty in tuning out the local station while it was testing Friday evening although without proper tuning it could be "heard all over the dial," as those who do not know how to tune out a local station are fond of saying.

There will probably be more testing done this evening.

CAPPER PROPOSES MARRIAGE AND DIVORCE BILL.

Washington, Dec. 19.—A constitutional amendment, giving congress the power to enact uniform marriage and divorce laws throughout the country, would be submitted to the American people under terms of a bill proposed in the senate by Senator Arthur Capper, Republican, of Kansas.

Pratt State's Only Representative

Ulster County Congressman Will Be Only Member of House Committee on Agriculture From New York State.

New York State's only member of the committee on agriculture of the House of Representatives, assignments to which have just been completed, is Representative Harcourt J. Pratt of this district.

This is the first time in a good many years that the committee of agriculture has not included in its membership at least two members of the New York delegation in congress. Former Congressman Charles B. Ward of DeBruce, whom Mr. Pratt succeeded, shared membership with former Congressman John D. Clarke of Delhi.

Congressman Pratt aspired to membership on the agricultural committee. Congressman Clarke's successor, Representative Harold S. Tolley of Binghamton, gained a place on the committee on post office and post roads, leaving Congressman Pratt alone from New York.

Having spent his whole life in Ulster county, in one of the richest fruit growing sections of the country, the new member takes his seat well equipped to give to agricultural problems a sympathetic understanding.

Shriners' Ball Here January 20

The Kingston Shriners' Association has completed arrangements to hold its annual ball on Wednesday evening, January 20, 1926. It will be held at the state armory as usual and the proceeds, as in previous years, will go for the benefit of the Industrial Home. Harry R. LeFever, president of the Association, and the members of the various committees, have determined to make the coming ball bigger and better than any of recent years. Arrangements are under way for an added feature program of acts and music that will surpass the best ever given by the association at former functions.

Lid Is Clamped on Non-Beverages

Washington, Dec. 19.—Use of whiskey, brandy and gin in the manufacture of toilet waters, perfumes, flavoring extracts and other non-beverage liquids will be prohibited after February 1, under new regulations issued by the treasury department. After this date, applications for withdrawal of these liquors from bond will be denied.

Prohibition officials expressed the belief today that the new regulations would check partially the flow of whiskey, gin, and brandy into bootleg channels.

Petty Crime Wave At Ellenville

Many minor robberies have been committed in the vicinity of Ellenville and in that village the past week-end and early this week. The Ellenville people have been the victims of several minor robberies but as yet none of the robbers have been apprehended.

Last Saturday night Basil Evans of Lackawack attended a dance in Ellenville and when leaving the dance found that his car had been stolen. Later in the evening the car was found abandoned not far from the dance hall.

John Goesselin of Napanoch left nearly a hundred dollars worth of purchases in his car last Saturday evening while he went into an ice cream parlor and when he returned he found that they had been taken.

Bernice Daniels, a little girl ten years of age was held up near the St. Mary's Church in Ellenville early in the week, the man taking what change she had in her pocket.

Mention has been made of the entry of the Tice residence at Cragsmoor in which the robbers ransacked the home and took many valuables.

State Troopers have been busy investigating the cases but nothing definite has been learned in regards to the robberies.

Metropolitan Agents Dine.

The agents of the Metropolitan Insurance Company of this district held their weekly Friday dinner at the Van-Ness Hotel restaurant, Crown street, and thoroughly enjoyed the menu served by Courtney Newcomb, who has taken over the restaurant.

Prosperity Has Perils Greater Than Adversity

Edgerton Advices Utmost Caution, Stating That a Nation Is in Its Most Critical Stage When It Enjoys Its Greatest Opulence.

Written for International News Service.

New York, Dec. 19.—Industrially, the United States enters the year 1926 in what I regard as its most promising condition in a decade. But with this optimistic thought I believe the entire business and social nation should exercise the utmost caution and be ever alive to its determination to keep the country in the lead of the world. Prosperity has its perils far greater than adversity, and a nation is in its most critical stage when it enjoys its greatest opulence.

We have toiled hard to build a great country—we will have to toil harder to keep it a great country. Only by synchronized industry can we continue our industrial nation as it is functioning today, giving the greatest happiness to man and management and maintaining the highest employment standards in the world.

European Situation.

Looking at Europe, we see a strong tendency toward world recovery. Eleven foreign debt settlements have been drawn up; a number of interallied debt funding arrangements have been made; a dozen nations have returned to the gold standard; as many smaller nations have reorganized their currency systems; and the Locarno agreement promises numerous aids to world stabilization. Many European countries are applying our machine production methods, developing long idle resources, borrowing enormous capital to reach out into the competitive domestic and foreign markets, becoming more democratic and widening the fields of opportunity for their masses rather than their classes.

All of these things may be translated easily into a challenge to this nation, into a warning that Europe, back again at work, will be a stronger competitor than she ever has been before. That calls for greater application, greater energy and greater organization of our industry than ever.

Strike Effects Public.

In our own country there is not a cloud on the industrial horizon that betokens anything more than a seasonal shower. The stability, solidity and sane contentment of our industry and our public are shown in the existing anthracite coal strike which, while in effect four months, has caused only the slightest ripple of apprehension—and this strike affects the public far more than it does industry.

Excellent Foresail.

A survey of the whole country made by our association two months ago revealed a healthy condition with excellent forecast for the winter and early part of the year. Production and sales quantities had increased over the previous year. Values and wages had increased. Production and consumption were nearer to a level with more even buying. Unemployment and labor dissentions had been reduced almost to zero. The same situation exists today, or if there has been a change it has been for the better. Our whole country is in a most enviable position; it is our duty to keep it so.

ARREST FOLLOWED AUTO CRASH; THREE INJURED

Addison White of R. F. D. No. 4 was arrested late Friday afternoon on a charge of operating his auto truck without lights, following a crash between the truck, which was loaded with brick, and the Hup roadster of Wesley Gregory of No. 159 Ten Broeck avenue, in which White, Gregory and Harriet Whittaker were injured.

This morning in police court the hearing in the White case was adjourned for a week as White was unable to leave home and is under the care of Dr. John F. Larkin. He was injured about the hip and leg. Mr. Gregory sustained a bruise on the head while Harriet Whittaker, who was in the Gregory car, sustained a shock as the result of the collision.

The two cars collided at the intersection of Downs street and Smith avenue about 5:30 o'clock Friday afternoon.

SUPERVISORS' ANNUAL BANQUET ON MONDAY

In the evening the members will attend the annual banquet of the Ulster County Supervisors' Association to be held at the Mine Lodge Antrim Hotel.

HAT-RACK'S CHRISTMAS

"You've a... idea," said the hat-rack to the red b... which hung down from the light in the center of the hall, "how different people are."

"They all seem very nice to me," said the red bell.

"Of course," said the hat-rack, "you only come out at Christmas time, and you only see them at their best.

"I see them all the year around. They hang their coats and hats on me, and somehow I seem to get to know them. You know, if you hold people's hats and coats for a long time, time and time again, you have a feeling of getting to know them.

"I like it this way. I know how sometimes they get cross and they put their coats on my hooks in a hurry and with a bit of a temper.

"They almost throw their hats at me.

"Then sometimes they're in such a hurry and so excited that they throw their things at me, and the things fall down. I can't bend over and pick them up.

"If I did I'd fall over and they wouldn't like that.

"Sometimes visitors come and put their coats and hats upon me, and sometimes they're nice, friendly visitors, and they are received so cordially, and others don't seem to be liked so much.

"I hear the greetings and the farewells.

"You can tell a lot by greetings and farewells.

"If visitors are greeted in a certain way, you can tell how much they are wanted.

"And if they leave and every one seems sorry to say good-by to them and urges them to come back soon again, then I know how much they're liked.

"Now and again there are parties, and I am crowded so I can hardly stand it. But I do stand it, for I know what fun every one is having, and that they wouldn't have such fun if they had to keep their wraps on.

"So I try to enter into the hospitality, too, and receive all their coats and hats with a good spirit.

"But the best time of all the year is Christmas time," the hat-rack continued.

"I like Christmas time," said the red bell.

"Of course you do," said the hat-rack, "and it is the jolliest time of the whole year.

"First of all I hear Santa Claus come. I stay out here in the hall and keep very quiet.

"The children have already gone to bed. I hear a great noise in the chimney and then I hear such a beautiful noise in the big living room.

"They Hang Their Coats and Hats on Me."

"I hear Santa Claus talk to himself as he sees sugar left for his reindeer, and he seems so pleased about that.

"I hear him chuckle with delight.

"Then I hear him doing a lot of different things—filling stockings and putting down presents, and then he is ready to leave.

"I catch a glimpse of him as he is leaving and he is so wonderful looking.

"I wish he could stay long enough to hang his beautiful red coat on me, but I know he can't.

"Then as soon as Christmas day comes there is one excitement after the other and then people come to call.

"They come in and shake the snow off their overshoes and they call out 'Merry Christmas' to each other in such cheery voices, and they put their cold coats on me, but the coats are welcomed by me, for they may feel cold, but they cover people all filled with the Christmas spirit.

"They come and see the presents, and the children dash in and out of the house.

"I feel as though I were a part of it all. It makes me so happy.

"And I love to see you hanging there, Red Bell. You're all part of the hat-rack's happy Christmas time."

"Thank you," said the Red bell. "I love Christmas time and I never feel ill at ease. Red seems to be such a popular color and it's my favorite shade, which makes it so pleasant."

"Merry Christmas season," said the hat-rack.

"Merry Christmas," said the red bell, as it swung a little back and forth.

HOMEMADE CANDIES

This is the season of the year when we enjoy making candy, having candy pulls, and giving the children of the family a good time.

Molasses Candy—To one and one half pounds of sugar add one cupful of molasses, one cupful of water and one-fourth cupful of vinegar. Boil until a hard ball is formed when dropped into cold water. Add one-half teaspoonful of cream of tartar as soon as the boiling commences. When almost done add one-half cupful of butter and one-fourth teaspoonful of soda. Pour out to cool, then pull.

Butter-Scotch.—Take two cupfuls of granulated sugar, two tablespoonfuls of water, a tablespoonful of butter, boil without stirring until it hardens on the spoon. Pour on flat, buttered plates and when cool mark off in squares.

Sultana Caramels.—Melt one-fourth of a cupful of butter, add two cupfuls of sugar, one-half cupful of milk, one-fourth cupful of molasses when boiling—boil seven minutes. Add two squares of unsweetened chocolate and stir until melted; boil seven minutes longer, add one cupful of chopped nuts and two tablespoonfuls of chopped raisins. Beat until creamy. Pour out and mark into squares.

Peanut Candy.—Take a pound of peanuts, shell and roll with a rolling pin until like coarse crumbs. Into a saucepan place two pounds of light brown sugar and twelve tablespoonfuls of butter. Stir until melted and count the time from the first bubble—cook and stir constantly for seven minutes. Remove from the heat, add the nuts and pour into a well-buttered pan to cool.

Coconut Candy.—Add softened butter, using a tablespoonful to a cupful of powdered sugar, cream until well blended, add coffee—a few drops at a time, mixing well until the mixture is creamy and smooth; add a cupful of coconut and drop from a spoon on buttered paper.

Barley Contains Large Percentage of Protein

Barley is a grain that contains somewhat higher percentage of protein than corn, and, for that reason when the two grains have the same market value per pound, should be more economical feed for hogs than corn. On the other hand, the large percentage of hull attached to the kernel gives barley a high percentage of crude fiber, which is one of its disadvantages for hog-feeding purposes. There is practically no food value in the hull and the stomach of the hog is not well adapted for handling roughage. It is generally considered that, pound for pound, barley is about 85 per cent of the feed value of No. 2 corn when fed to hogs in connection with a high-protein supplement like tankage. A five-year investigation at the North Dakota experiment station shows barley up in a somewhat more favorable light.

Control Chinch Bugs

Fall is the time when the chinch bug can be most successfully controlled. Whenever the bugs have caused injury during the preceding season, 98 per cent or them will be found in the fall hibernating in the clump-forming grasses, such as bunch grass and bluestem, in meadows, pastures, ravines, waste places, and along roadsides. Co-operative experiments with farmers in many localities have shown that where these bug-infested areas have been systematically burned, the chinch-bug problem has been solved for the ensuing year.

Superintendent Michael stated t he had finally secured enough t coal to run the high school for remainder of the winter. The l had cost $2.50 at the mines and out $6 delivered.

Repair and Construction Work.

Trustee Beeres for the building mmittee reported that the toi- s in No. 6 were about completed. cy could be used now but there s some cleaning up to do and they uld be ready after the Christmas ation. No Stereopticon Slides Now.

The matter of stereopticon slides for the schools, which was talked over at a prior meeting, was brought up. At this time it was not deemed advisable to attempt the installation of the needed equipment which would be required if the city was to take advantage of the free slides offered by the state. The state imposes strict requirements and it would mean a large outlay for installation of connections in practically every room.

Superintendent Michael offered a report which contains a report of the principal of the high school in regard to the work accomplished during the past year at the high school. The report appears elsewhere in The Freeman.

The board then went into executive session.

Pupils.

During the schools year 1924-1925, 1,113 pupils were registered, classified as follows:

	Boys	Girls	Total
Residents	379	416	795
Nonresidents	143	175	318
Total	522	591	1,113

The graduating class of 1925 consisted of 138 pupils, 77 girls, 61 boys. Fifty-one of these graduates have gone to higher institutions of learning, 24 boys, 27 girls. These pupils have entered 31 different institutions.

The class of 1925 captured four of the five state scholarships awarded Ulster county. The following are the winners of these scholarships and the college where each is:

John Clarke, Manhattan.
Charlotte Gillett, Vassar.
Jerome Lehner, Cornell.
Mary Bott, State College.

Jerome Lehner also won the Cornell scholarship on competitive examination.

The entering class this September consists of 118 boys and 130 girls total, 248. Ninety-seven of these were from our city grammar schools, 151 from the city parochial schools and the rural schools. The average age of these entering students is 12.9 for boys and 13.8 for girls.

It may be of interest to know that the average ages of our students in the various classes is as follows:

January and June.	Boys	Girls
Freshmen	14.4	14.7
Sophomores	15.6	15.4
Juniors	16.7	16.5
Seniors	17.3	16.8

Year-Subject Promotions.

There are no regents' examinations given in English first year and second year or French, Spanish or Latin first year. Promotions in these subjects depend entirely upon the pupils' school record. The reports of these subjects for the year follows:

Subject.	Registered.	Promoted.	Per cent Promoted.
English first year	340	252	74.1
English second year	159	129	81.1
Latin, first year	195	129	66.1
French, first year	62	56	90.3
Spanish, first year	27	23	85.1

Term Promotions.

In addition to the above regents' report and year subjects completed, the promotions at the close of the first term of each year subject are of interest. The following shows the number registered and number promoted at the close of the first term in each of the year subjects for 1924-1925:

Department	Registered.	Promoted.	Per cent Promoted.
English	1,024	866	82.7
French	136	125	93.1
Spanish	70	59	84.2
Latin	290	205	78.2
Mathematics	585	479	81.8
Science
Phys. Chem.)	136	91	66.9
Biology	282	215	82.4
History	259	217	88.2
Commercial	391	324	82.8
Machine shop	31	28	90.7
Joinery	37	25	67.5
Homemaking	92	86	93.4

Certain Conditions.

There are 25 teachers doing regular classroom work and there are in our building 29 rooms possible for regular class work. This includes the two shops and rooms 17, 21 and 27, which are far from ideal for class recitations because they are small and unventilated. One is not properly heated and one is near the noisy exhaust fan. There are therefore six teachers without a home room for recitation purposes. This is unsatisfactory to teachers and pupils.

We are again using one of the lunch rooms for an "overflow" study hall. During these periods each week 247 girls are accommodated by this rather unsatisfactory method.

Very respectfully submitted.
B. C. VAN INGEN, Principal.

I cannot refrain from commenting upon the splendid record this report shows. The attainment of such a record is possible only by the most hearty cooperation on the part of pupils and teachers. Every line of Principal Van Ingen's report is worthy of our careful consideration.

Respectfully submitted.
M. J. MICHAEL, Superintendent.

THE KEEN-EDGED KNIFE

By ROSE HENDERSON

(© by Short Story Pub. Co.)

BELOW were the gray depths that lay slumbering and mysterious beyond the cliff's ragged edge. Above was the clear, calm, interminable blue. Cuma Ventura crouched in the warm sand, leaning her head against the rough rock at her side. Behind her were thick short cactus bushes growing in scattered clumps and back of these the sides of the mountain rose, steep, jagged and barren. The rock was warm against her cheek though the sun was an hour below the Gaudaloupe peaks and the cactus shadows were growing darker on the long slopes. The air seemed heavy with silence. No bird sang. A vinegerone slipped under a stone at the edge of the cliff.

The girl sat quietly, her head bowed. The heavy, dark braids were bound with bands of glittering beads. Away in the distance sounded the faint tinkle of sheep-bells and the dull barking of a dog. At these sounds the girl raised her head. She snatched from her neck a small round locket, stared at the trinket a moment as it lay in her hand, and then flung it over the cliff into the chasm below. Her slim brown face was flushed; her eyes were large with pain but there were no tears in them.

"So it meant not anything to him—not anything," she muttered. The truth was slowly becoming real to her and it came with the weight of death itself. It was hard to believe after the beautiful dreams, so hard. There would be nothing more to be happy about. She would have to marry Petro as her father wished. Duro, her pony, and the new saddle would be his. He would beat the little Duro and her, too, he would beat her of course when he was jealous and angry.

At the thought of the ugly Mexican suitor her face broke into quick angry frowns. She pulled her long braids over her shoulders. Pierre had patted them once as she rode beside him and she had blushed foolishly. She hated herself for those blushes. And when his hand had chanced to touch hers on the saddle-horn, or when he had leaned over her, helping her to read the English books, she had trembled with a new and delicious joy.

She had taught him to know the desert and the mountains. He was often reckless in his ignorance. Once with her lips she had drawn the blood from a rattlesnake bite on his arm and Pierre had called her a brave little nurse. They had ridden for hours, for days together under the open sky. Often they had sat here among the rocks before the cliff. He had called it "the edge of the world." Once when she stood very near the perilous brink, he had caught her back suddenly, tenderly, and her head had rested for a moment on his shoulder. Together they had felt the twilight come. She had listened to his talk of his own people, of the cold winters, the snow, the sleighing, and the strange noisy cities. She had listened with her heart beating fast, her eyes upon his face and her ears filled with the music of his voice. They had seen the stars come into the deep dark sky and had watched the blue and purple shadows that cling along the "edge of the world" after sunset. Once a mountain lion had crept upon them and Pierre had shot the creature with her gun. He was careless about weapons himself, and often went unarmed even after nightfall.

Then he had gone away. His letter came explaining his hasty leaving. He would come back soon. How she wept over the letter and the desolate loneliness that came with his absence. But he would come back, and she waited. She had borne her father's scolding and Petro's hateful presence, and she had been happy through it all. Now the thought of her happiness was more bitter than the memory of her misery. He had come back and it meant nothing to him. He had played with her and then cast her aside, as she would gather a yellow poppy in the mountains and throw it away, thirsty and helpless, on the hot sand. The girl's breast heaved, her eyes glowed, little points of light scintillating in their still depths. She knitted her low dark brows and pulled the small silver-handled knife from her belt.

"He shall not go back," she said softly. Her fingers stole along the sharp blade, testing its keen edge, and her lips parted in a cunning smile. It was the kind of smile that often flashed across old Diego's heavy lips. Cuma had hated her father for that smile. Once he had stabbed a half-breed cowpuncher because the man refused to trade ponies with him, and Cuma watched the lariat reel from his saddle, coiling. She had forgotten the ugly horror of it now and remembered only the quick, soft thrust of the knife.

"He shall not go," she repeated.

She sprang to her feet with a swift, easy grace. She was strong and supple and closely knit. Her slender, rounded figure was as full of life as an antelope's. It was this abounding vigor that had attracted the man he had grown to love. It had held him in spite of the difference in their breeding. Sometimes its grip was stronger than the call of generations of civilization and environment. She was so simply and so wholly a woman. And her mind was ready, eager to follow his. Sometimes he had wondered if she might not learn his way of life, but that was only when he had grown delirious with the sense of her. When he weighed the matter in soberer moments he knew that this was impossible, that it would mean his coming to her level in the end.

Upon his return to the plains he had steeled his heart against her and she had felt the change in her first keen look. The desert wildness had not robbed her of the subtle intuitions of her sex. He did not see the fires of her hate. She hid them under the heavy-lashed eyelids, and she stifled the hot pain in her breast. But the fires of her hate were burning and the pain in her breast was not dead. Twilight was creeping up the long valley and the girl's figure was blurred against the dull background.

"He shall not go," she said again and gazed over the edge of the cliff where the tiny gold locket had gone.

Then suddenly she stood erect listening. There was the quick, soft step of padded feet among the cactus bushes, a rustle; and a low growl that sent a chill through the girl's warm veins. She sprang to her feet, lithe, quick-eyed and alert. There was no mistaking the sound. It was a panther. She felt in anticipation the sudden crushing of mouth and claws upon her, and every muscle was nerved for resistance. But the beast seemed to be parrying an assault, and she peered into the cactus jungle at her back. Through the branches of a dwarf saguara she caught sight of a long, tense body crouched close above the ground. She watched it stealthily out of the tail of her eye. It was creeping forward with a sneaking, cat-like movement, but it was not coming directly toward her. The girl's head turned, following the animal's advance, but her body was still like the stiff, motionless cactus beside her. Her fingers tightened their grip on the knife and the breath came noiselessly through her parted lips. In a flash her mind took in every detail of the situation, the yawning chasm a few feet in front of her, the ragged mountain at her back, and the crouching beast advancing stealthily over the sand. All the fierceness and cunning of the desert-born animal was reflected in the tense suppleness of her pose. Only one thing puzzled her, and that was the direction of the panther's advance. She was losing the yellow form in the deeper bushes at her back. Suddenly there was a scuffling and snapping in the shadows, a man's low curse and the ripping of the panther's claws against coarse clothing. In a moment two bodies rolled struggling on the ground beside the girl. She saw the man's arms tense and knotted against the beast's shaggy breast. She saw his brown hair.

"Pierre, Pierre," she cried, breathlessly. He, too, had been lingering at the old trysting place.

The claws were buried in the man's shoulders, the grinning mouth was reaching for his throat, but the brown arms with their rigid muscles held the creature back. The man's strength was being tested to the uttermost. His body swayed above the brute's. His hands clutched the straining neck. They came nearer, almost against the girl's feet. She saw the man's arms bloody with cuts and scratches, his face white, his teeth set; she could hear his hoarse breathing. As they turned toward her she plunged the knife into the panther's taut, yellow throat.

The angered beast whirled about suddenly, dropped the man's shoulders and sprang upon his new enemy. The girl crumpled under his weight, the knife fell, her hands clutched blindly at the open jaws. The man jumped to his feet. The panther leaped forward against the girl's body and the two, struggling together, lurched over the cliff's edge and disappeared. The man flung himself on the ground and calling wildly, leaned far over the inscrutable depths.

But the girl did not answer. Her last glimpse of the world was a confused blur, the jagged cliff's edge and the sky's dull crimson whirling madly, and then the blue and purple depths rushing upward as her feet left the earth. And on the sand at the rock's edge the silver-handled knife lay dusty and blood-stained.

Homing Pigeons Not Guided by Instinct

It is popularly believed that a homing pigeon is able to find its way home from any distance merely by exercising this mysterious something called instinct. Nothing could be farther from the truth. A young pigeon might love his home better than his life, but he could no more find his way back to his loft from a distance of 500 miles, if before being taken to that point he had not learned some intervening landmarks, than could an aviator, without perfect mechanical instruments and maps, find his way from New York to San Francisco.

Homing pigeons return to their lofts, says Jack O'Donnell, in the Saturday Evening Post, primarily because their loft represents love, food, warmth, kindness and comfort. It's home and they are female pigeons.

Mr. O'Donnell cites instances to prove that it is memory and knowledge of the country, rather than instinct, that takes the birds back to their homes.

Sex and Athletics

According to a study made by Prof. A. V. Hill of the University college, London, women athletes are able to attain a maximum speed of only 70 per cent of that of men, as a matter of endurance. A woman is able to expend only 62 per cent of the energy expendable by a man of the same weight.

Lions in Captivity

The National Zoological park says it is generally regarded that lions live longer in captivity than in their natural wild state. The young, however, are sometimes injured in captivity, while the older animals profit by it. As these animals grow older they are often attacked by stronger beasts of the wild and killed.

"Lungs" in the Skin

The skin is spoken of as the "third lung" because of the fact that there as much waste matter is discharged from the body by means of the skin as through the lungs.

DESERTIONS FROM THE ARMY.

Within a year 2,000 out of 12,000 regular army soldiers quartered on Governor's Island, off New York city, have deserted. In his October report Secretary Davis attributes this to "poor housing conditions and the excessive fatigue duty which the upkeep of the wooden barracks involves." It seems that the soldiers on Governor's Island are still occupying shacks hastily erected in wartime, and that at a number of other points in the country, Fort Howard, Camp Meade, Fort Benning, etc., the temporary barracks are practically of the same character. It is reported that even officers, especially junior officers, "live in wooden buildings that no self-respecting farm hand would accept." If so, well may Secretary Davis say that the problem of adequate housing for the personnel of the regular army is "the most pressing which confronts the War Department today."

The Army and Navy Journal agrees that the morale of units so housed is "not as high as should be hoped for." We read that soldiers of the Sixteenth Infantry, which won imperishable glory in France, find it necessary to be "eternally tinkering" at their makeshift quarters on Governor's Island and get very tired of such "fatigue duty" on their salary of $21 a month, to say nothing of their lack of comfort. If the conditions are as described, they are a disgrace to the army establishment, and something ought to be done about it soon, although the estimate of a hundred million dollars as necessary to provide neglected troops with habitable quarters seems excessive. No wonder there are many desertions, but poor housing is not the only cause. No able-bodied young American can be expected to reveal great enthusiasm for army service at $21 a month during inactive and dull times of peace.

MILLIONAIRE'S PROTEST.

The spectacle of 56 Americans who pay taxes on incomes of more than a million dollars begging Congress not to cut their surtax rates from 40 to 20 per cent is one of the most remarkable ever witnessed. It was supposed that all Americans so fortunate as to have such incomes were eager to have their surtaxes cut, but according to Mr. Ogden Mills, their spokesman, the higher the surtaxes the less the rich will have to pay, because, as Mr. Mellon has so often argued, the higher the surtax rates the more money escapes into tax exempt securities. Mr. Odgen Mills seemed to imply that if the surtaxes are cut the rich will promptly take their money out of tax exempt securities and then be obliged to pay much more than before, but he did not say why the cut would cause them to take their money out of tax-exempt securities or submit any proof that they would do so.

We can only conclude that the 56 gentlemen headed by Mr. Mills are convinced that the partisanship against wealth in this country is much more pronounced than it is, and that the way to make sure of a vote of the majority in Congress for the surtax cut is for the rich to oppose that measure with an appearance of great concern. For only by suspecting something of this sort can we arrive at anything like a reasonable explanation. Whether the chances of the surtax cut will be increased by this means remains to be seen. Meanwhile it is interesting to note that, despite the Mellon theory and what suggests play-acting on the part of the 56 millionaires, the authors of the bill have fixed on $88,691,726 as the estimated amount of revenue the government will lose if surtax rates are cut as proposed.

When about to sail, after some weeks in this country, J. St. Loe Strachey, editor of the London Spectator, spoke in a way to convey the impression that he was highly pleased with practically everything in this country, but added: "I admit that I never dared to speak to a policeman, but I really believe that if I had I should have had a helpful, if stern, response." Possibly it is true that our policemen cultivate a stern port which they think is in keeping with the majesty of the law they represent, and which may be in contrast with the manner of the good-humored London cop, but our street guardians when approached are not lacking in readiness to be of service.

Every citizen, whether he is a day laborer or a millionaire, is interested in three common problems. First, bread and butter for himself and his family; second, business conditions throughout the state, the nation and the world which will permit peaceful and profitable operation of industry and farming; third, the investment of capital in business enterprise which furnishes steady employment for labor. By an understanding of these questions on the part of the general public a sound business balance is maintained, and uninterrupted employment assured.

HEAT COMFORT.

One of the things we can't just understand is why people who come from the British Isles are able to withstand our cold weather here without inconvenience.

It is not unusual to see them during their first winter or two with us, getting along without gloves or overcoats.

There can be no question but that their methods of heating their homes, which they will acknowledge is much behind ours in point of securing heat, is really responsible for their ability to stand our colder weather.

Over here we are not satisfied unless our homes or offices show a temperature of from 70 degrees to 75 degrees F., whereas 60 degrees F. would be considered a "comfortable" temperature over there. In fact they bitterly complain of our overheated, stuffy offices and public buildings.

A Toledo physician investigating this matter tells us that the United States soldier did not stand the cold in the field, the barracks, or the hospitals as did the soldiers of France and Great Britain, because one was accustomed to 70 degrees to 80 degrees F., and the other to only 60 degrees F. The United States soldiers were more sensitive to, and less resistant towards nose and throat infections due to this.

He points out also that the air in the cold season contains less water anyway, and then when we heat this air, which of course takes up less space, we reduce the moisture in the air still more, until it is so dry that it dries out the woodwork, wilts the flowers, spoils or dries out complexions, saps the vigor, and so forth. This lack of moisture gives the "chilly" feeling and more heat is demanded.

He points out further that if we could accustom ourselves to 60 degrees F. we could save half our fuel bill, because it costs as much to raise the temperature from 60 degrees to 70 degrees as it does from 40 degrees to 60 degrees.

Our heating and ventilating engineers are working on this problem, and just how to give sufficient moisture without too much heat for the average household, will likely be solved for us. You see we want the moisture in the winter and we don't want it in the summer.

In the meantime water in pans or receptacles behind the radiators is of help. Opening up the doors and windows for a little while daily, and getting in some outside air, with its larger supply of water in it, will make us more comfortable with a lower degree of temperature.

GENERAL HOWE REGRETS.

General Washington, in a letter to General Howe, of the British Army, which was quoted in yesterday's story, had gone out of his way to say some nice words about the family name of the British commander. He was referring to the fact that an elder brother of General Howe had been a companion in arms with the American colonials in the French and Indian War and had been so popular with them that Massachusetts had erected a monument to his memory in Westminster Abbey. But Washington had added that he was sorry to see a Howe in company with the "wicked ministry" of King George.

His kind words were not received in the same spirit by Howe. That cutting remark about the "wicked ministry" did not please His Lordship. So after dismissing the main part of Washington's letter by saying tht humane treatment for Ethan Allen, then a prisoner of the British, was no affair of his because Allen had been captured in Canada where he had no authority. Howe closed his reply to Washington with this:

"It is with regret, considering the character you have always maintained among your friends, as a gentleman of the strictest honor, and delicacy, that I find cause to resent a sentence in the conclusion of your letter, big with invective against my superiors, and insulting to myself, which should obstruct any further intercourse between us."

Thus ended for a time the intercourse between the two generals, but not for long, for six weeks later Washington was again writing Howe to secure the exchange of another prisoner. His scolding by his adversary had bothered him not at all.

General Howe was not always as fierce with his infantry and artillery as he was in this instance with his pen. Many massive volumes have been written about his military genius, or his lack of it. His military critics are legion. However, in the particular situation in which he found himself most 150 years ago, he was doing his best, it would seem, to keep his redcoats from using the burnable part of Boston for firewood. These redcoats were on unruly set when off duty, and it was as much as he could do, if not more, to keep them from plundering and burning in accordance with their conceptions of the rights and privileges of an army under siege. To some extent he succeded, but not to a large extent, and Boston was to be anything but a pleasant place to live in during that memorable winter of its siege.

THE BLUE-NOSE BABBIT.

This innocuous-looking creature is responsible for the great vice among the natives of Sumatra known as babbiting. Two full-grown babbits are put in a prize fight ring after being fed a mash of red peppers and ginger ale, and the natives place bets on the one that will first start the fight. The babbit is slow to anger, and the two slowly circle about each other, making remarks about ancestry, personal appearance, etc., until one is thoroughly maddened. He then knocks his opponent over with his tail, delivers two scratches with his spurs and the fight is over.

The monkey-like appearance of the beast is partly due to his baboon ancestry and also to the way the filbert head is placed and decorated. The body is also a filbert, and the ears split navy beans. A popcorn nose painted blue, clove legs and almond feet, and popcorn spurs make up the rest of the creature, except for the tail, which is a piece of spaghetti that has been softened and bent.

HowaScream May Be Incarcerated

Washington, Dec. 19.—Can a scream be locked up?

Yes, and furthermore a street car's clangor can be confined to the street and the blare of the saxophone in the apartment above can be imprisoned there, reports the National Bureau of Standards at Washington, D. C., which just has finished experiments in preventing noises of a big city from disturbing the quiet of its homes and apartments.

"Noise can be kept out of a room, just as well as a snowstorm can," reported Dr. Paul S. Heyl, chief of the Bureau's sound laboratory. "The main difference is that to keep out snow the stouter the wall, the better, while to ward off noise the flimsier the wall the better."

To prove publicly that he can play traffic policeman to a speeding sound, Dr. Heyl had a partition which he promised would be "sound-proof" built between two adjoining ballrooms of the Mayflower hotel at Washington. He arranged to test it on the night that the big Charity Ball was to be in one ballroom and at the same time a ball to members of the Diplomatic Corps in the other.

Came the first dance! A nine piece jazz orchestra struck up a spirited fox trot in the Charity Ball room. Another orchestra played a dreamy waltz in the Diplomatic Ball room. But there was no confusion. Not a fox trot note could be heard in the room where the waltz was being danced, nor did a single waltz note drift into the neighboring room.

"The music from both orchestras was caged in the intervening sound-proof partition," Dr. Heyl explained. "The partition is made of hair felt, supported by thin boards of sugar cane fiber, and the musical sounds became tangled and lost in this wilderness of hair and fiber. Hair, fiber and similar pliable substances, we have found, enmesh and deaden sound which would vibrate through the strongest steel."

Radio tubes, like some of the older humans, eventually lose their "pep" under the strain of constant work and require a rest or need to be rejuvenated. This rejuvenating process, as applied to vacuum tubes, is not as serious an operation, however, as the one some humans undergo in the search for youth.

It is known as "reactivation" and is said by the bureau of standards radio experts to renew the sensitivity of electron tubes of the thoriated tungsten filament type.

Concerning this method of reactivation the bureau has issued the following report, so skilled listeners can "pep up" their tubes themselves:

"Electron tubes in radio receiving sets eventually lose their sensitivity. This sometimes progresses to the point where the receiving set operates very poorly or not at all, even though the tube filament is not burned out. The user of the set frequently confuses this condition with that due to an exhausted "B" battery. If the tubes are of the thoriated tungsten (X-L) filament type they can usually be rejuvenated by a simple process, and made to serve as well as new tubes in the receiving set.

Two Cannot Be Reactivated.

"It happens that most of the tubes now used are of the thoriated tungsten type, and it therefore becomes of quite general interest for the public to know how to secure the full life of their electron tubes. The WD-11 and WD-12 types of tubes are the only ones extensively used which cannot be reactivated. In these tubes the source of the electrons is a coating of certain oxides on the surface of the filament, and when this has been used up no process can renew it.

"The thoriated tungsten filaments, however, used in most of the various other types of tubes, contain the oxide of thorium throughout the whole mass of the tungsten filament, this oxide having been originally put in incandescent lamps to keep the filaments from being too fragile. The filaments are given a treatment which produces a layer of atoms of thorium on the surface of the tungsten, and this thorium, which is radioactive, emits electrons much more copiously than the tungsten would. After long use, or after burning the filament too brightly, the layer of thorium atoms is evaporated off, and so few electrons are then emitted that the tube does not function properly. Reactivation is a process which boils additional thorium atoms out of the interior of the tungsten filament and forms a new layer of thorium atoms on the surface.

Method Is Successful.

"The thoriated filament was developed by the General Electric company, which has also developed the methods of reactivating tubes of this type. The bureau of standards has found that the reactivation process is quite successful, and frequently makes a wonderful difference in the results obtained with a receiving set. The process is essentially [illegible] operation of the filament for a very [illegible] of interval at a specified high voltage (called "flashing"), followed by a lower voltage for a longer time (called "aging"), all of this with no grid or plate voltage. The flashing reduces some of the thorium and the aging forms the required surface layer. The following schedule of these operations is the result of extensive experience of the Radio Corporation of America, and is published here by courtesy of that company:

FLASHING.

Radiotron	Filament Voltage	Time
UX and UV 199	10 volts	20 sec.
UX and UV 201-A	15 volts	1 min.
UX-120	10 volts	1 min.

AGING.

Radiotron	Filament Voltage	Time
UX and UV 199	4.5 volts	10 min.
UX and UV 201-A	7.5 volts	10 min.
UX-120	4.5 volts	10 min.

"Exactly the same procedures apply for C and CX tubes as for the UX tubes of corresponding number. Thus, C and CX-299 correspond to U and UX-199, C and CX-301-A to U and UX-201-A and CX-220 to UX 120.

"In carrying out this schedule it is absolutely essential to have a voltmeter of a good degree of accuracy and to use a watch. No grid or plate voltages are used. Either alternating or direct current may be used for heating the filaments.

Tubes Need Treatment.

"It is important that reactivation not be attempted until the tube user has assured himself that the tubes actually need this treatment; that is, he should make certain that his batteries are not run down and that other parts of the receiving set are in proper order. The schedule above should be followed with great care. The process is useful only for the thoriated tungsten filament type of tubes.

"The apparatus necessary for carrying out the process is simple. The filament is connected to the necessary source of voltage, nothing being connected to the grid and plate. A voltmeter is connected across the filament terminals. If alternating current is available the source of voltage can be a small transformer, such as those for running doorbells or electric toys. The voltage tap nearest the voltage specified should be selected and a rheostat in series with the filament used to adjust to the exact voltage. The voltmeter must be one for alternating current.

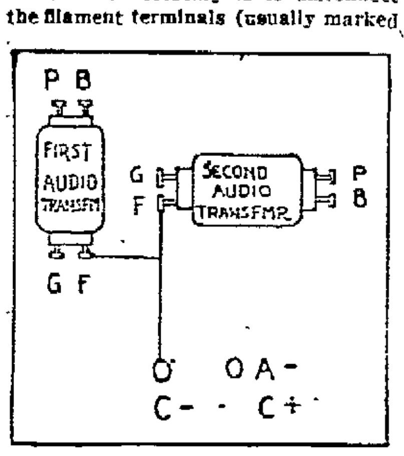
"If alternating current and a transformer are not available, dry batteries or storage batteries may be used as a source of voltage. A single dry cell when new will furnish approximately 1.5 volts. A rheostat should be connected in series to give the exact filament terminal voltage as indicated on a direct-current voltmeter.

"There are several manufacturing companies that advertise tube reactivators at varying prices. Radio dealers are beginning to give tube reactivation service."

"C" Battery Valuable in Audio Amplifier Unit

While most of the new radio set models employ the "C" battery unit in their radio amplifier units, a great many of the sets now being used by radio fans were built without this valuable unit. The use of a "C" battery will increase the efficiency of any receiver, and reduce the cost of its operation. It eliminates a great deal of distortion when a heavy "B" battery voltage is applied to the amplifier plates.

It is a very simple operation to install a "C" battery in any receiver. All that is necessary is to disconnect the filament terminals (usually marked



How to Connect "C" Battery In Audio Circuit of Receiver.

"F") of the transformers from the rest of the circuit. Then connect the two "F" terminals together and lead this to a binding post for the negative "C" battery terminal. This is shown in the accompanying diagram.

The positive teminal of the "C" battery can be connected to the regular "A-minus" post of the receiver as shown in the diagram.

For "B" battery voltages of from 45 to 67 use 4½-volt "C" battery. This may be procured in a small block at any of the local shops. For voltages above 67, at least 6 volts of "C" battery should be used.

"The "C" battery, which draws but very little current in its operation, will last a considerable length of time. It will probably be necessary to renew it but once a year.

Reverse "A" Connections

A sudden dropping off of signal strength may be caused by a weakening of the "A" battery. The storage battery, when it needs a recharge, generally drops suddenly, and the lower brilliancy of filament indicates a weakening current. No matter what type of circuit is employed it is always a good idea to reverse the "A" battery connections. Some sockets have the positive and negative signs marked incorrectly, so to verify the proper contacts for the battery the connections should be reversed.

INTERNATIONAL MEETING OF RADIO ENGINEERS.

New York, Dec. 19—For the first time in the history of radio, the scientists and engineers who made radio telegraphy and radio broadcasting a realty, will meet in an international meeting and convention in New York city January 18 and 19. Notices have been sent by the Institute of Radio Engineers, under whose auspices the meetings are being held, to its membership both here and abroad. Included in its membership roll are such illustrious names as Guglielmo Marconi, Edwin H. Armstrong, Louis A. Hazeltine, E. F. W. Alexanderson, George O. Squier, Lee de Forest, Thomas A. Edison, Michael Pupin, Irving Langmuir, Reginald Fessenden, Ellery Stone, David Sarnoff and John V. L. Hogan, and many of these will contribute to the program of the meetings, at which, it is predicted, some of the most difficult problems facing the radio art will be solved. There have been numerous meetings of radio sales experts and of the manufacturing, communication and broadcasting interests of the art but this is the first recorded meeting of the engineering and scientific minds which have made the inventions responsible for the very existence of the broadcasting art.

Library Service For the Sick

Was the Radio Health Topic Discussed Over WGY Friday Night by Miss Margery Quigley, Former Head of State Library Association.

Library service for the sick and convalescent was discussed over the radio from station WGY Friday night by Miss Margery Quigley, former president of the New York State Library Association. This was one of the regular weekly health talks arranged by the State Department of Health.

"When you go to the library it is usually for knowledge, inspiration or mental relaxation," said Miss Quigley, "but do you realize that a library can help you to keep well, or if sick can aid you in the process of getting well?

"Let us suppose you have been ill and are now going through that slow tedious process of getting your strength back. Time hangs heavily on your hands for you have to stay quiet and the current magazines fail to satisfy. Get in touch with your local librarian, state your tastes, and she will help you to find satisfactory reading matter. Books will make the time pass pleasantly and perhaps profitably and probably save you from overtaxing your strength; for when one gets tired of doing nothing he is most apt to do too much.

"Perhaps your sickness has left you in such a condition that you cannot take up your former occupation and you are wondering what pursuit you can follow when you are on your feet again. Any number of libraries pride themselves on fine collections of books on occupational therapy. If your library doesn't possess them it can borrow them for you from the State Library. All libraries will render similar service, in varying degree and method, if the doctor, nurse or patient will merely indicate the need.

"But if the grown ups are well, and it is some little one in the family who is ill, what can the library do? One tiny village library saves paper doll pages for its small friends who are getting over some children's disease or other; another furnishes any amount of colored picture material during the year for the ever-present scrap-book of convalescent childhood. Many libraries have interesting lists of children's books to be read aloud.

"Possibly you are not really sick but are tired out, nerve tired, or your food doesn't seem to digest well. Some well-meaning friend suggests a food fad or urges you to take up this or that method of training your nerves or your liver or some other part of your body. Don't take this kind of advice off hand. Your doctor or your library will tell you whether such methods fall under the designation of quackery or not. Libraries can't afford to spend money for books unless they are recognized by the best authorities. There are many excellent books on all phases of the health question. Your librarian will help you to select them.

"Suppose, however, that the disease with which you or some member of your family is affected is infectious and your household is under quarantine. Of course libraries can't lend books under such conditions but many libraries, if informed of the circumstances, will make up packages of books are magazines which may be burned after use. The smaller the library, the more neighborly and unusual the service is likely to be.

"When to stay away from a library is as important to know as when and how to use it. Sending children around to the story hour or to get a few books when the family is waiting for quarantine to be lifted is a trick frequently played on libraries by persons otherwise honest in observing isolation rules. This practice is particularly noticeable in cases of the milder infectious ailments. Few people, except librarians realize how many children with pink eye come to the library directly from the school doctor or nurse when told that they cannot stay in school.

"Public libraries are meant to be used. They can serve a very useful purpose in aiding to promote health and prevent sickness if they have the co-operation of the physicians and the nurses."

Rudolph Valentino

Rodolpho Alfonzo Raffaelo Pierre Filibert Guglielmi di Valentina d'Antonguella—the full name of this prominent "movie" star—was born in the little village of Castellaneta, Italy, May 6, 1895. It was not until after his arrival in New York, in 1913, that he learned to dance, and later obtained a position in a prominent New York cafe as a dancer. After an unsuccessful tour with a musical comedy he joined a motion picture producing organization.

AN ABBREVIATED STORY

THE PROFITEERS

"WHY is it," thought Jazzbo, the man from Mars, "that the earth-people don't govern themselves more sensibly, as we do up on Mars? What they call the high cost of living, for instance—what is the cause of such a silly state of things?"

And he decided to go to those three representative business men of whom he had heard so often—the butcher, the baker and the candlestick maker, and question them. So he stepped into Loiner's butcher shop and inquired politely: "Might I ask you to tell me what causes the high cost of living?"

"Selfishness—pure selfishness," replied the butcher gloomily. He removed a sign reading "Frankfurters, 30 cents a pound," and replaced it with one reading: "Frankfurters, 3 for 50 cents," and continued, "If everybody was satisfied with a fair profit, like me, there wouldn't be no high cost of living. The profiteers!"

Kneedle, the baker, in response to the same question, said: "Nobody ain't satisfied with a reasonable return on their investment—they want to hog it all, the profiteers!"

And he sold a dozen rolls to a customer for 65 cents, and Jazzbo went to the shop of Tallowbaum, the candlestick maker, who said: "The high cost of living? Piggishness. Look around you at the profiteers!"

"I'll take that candlestick marked $9.50," said Jazzbo.

"That's $9.80 today—I forgot to change the card," said Tallowbaum, and Jazzbo reeled out and leaned against a freshly painted lamppost to wait for the soothing light from Mars.

Radio in India 1,000 Years Ago

Records In Palmyra Leaves Treat of Wireless, Embalming, Cotton and Geology—Fear Library Will Be Removed Here.

London, Dec. 19.—Many complex scientific problems, including that of wireless telegraphy, had been solved in India nearly a thousand years ago, according to ancient books and manuscripts which have just come to light in Calcutta.

These records, the property of Dr. Syed Mohammed Kassim, constitute the rarest and most valuable library in India, according to information reaching London.

The library contains numerous manuscripts of palmyra leaves, dealing with religion, philosophy, arts, science, history, medicine, astrology, palmistry and many other subjects. It is believed to have had its origin long before the Bijapur kingdom in India.

Many Subjects Treated.

Among the subjects treated are:

Embalming—The process described is so elaborate and of such a similar character that there is reason to believe that the ancient Egyptians learned this art from the Indians.

Wireless Telegraphy—It is said that communications can be carried from one place to another thousands of miles away by means of two stone plates, specially constructed.

Cotton growing—Processes are described by means of which it is possible to grow cotton of any color desired.

Geology—Operations are explained by means of which it is possible to know what things are hidden below the surface of the earth, so that the location underground of such things as precious metals, hidden treasure, buried cities, etc., can be easily ascertained.

Glass—Processes are given to prepare a kind of glass, which, [illegible] held over the surface of the sea, clearly how all its contents at bottom.

Snow fall—Ways are shown cause snow to fall in hot and prevent its fall in cold [illegible]

Methods are also set forth: to big mountains; to keep water continuously for thousands of and to convert base metals into and silver.

Many tourists from America inspected this famous library there is a possibility that it will purchased for removal in toto to United States. To prevent the moval of the manuscripts from dia, efforts are being made at cutta to raise a fund to purc the records and place them in a eum.

ATTENTION TO THE DETAILS OF DRESS IS WHAT COUNTS IF ONE WOULD PRESENT A HARMONIOUS WHOLE.

Everybody knows, but alas, everybody does not heed, that attention to details is what makes for success in dress. Everybody concedes that it is the reason for the far famed reputation of the French, yet—we go on willy nilly buying this and that, anything that pleases without putting any real intelligence into it.

This ensemble idea which may be the bane of one's existence or the boon, continues so persistently that why not really assemble a wardrobe which is correlated? Things do not actually have to match,—but they must blend. Select a range of color, or even two, and stick to it, make it the basic color note of your spring, or Palm Beach wardrobe, and you will be rewarded by seeing how much better dressed you seem. Say you have to choose an evening wrap—select one, not in an definite color, but one which, because of its neutral tones or the multiplicity of them, as in a rich brocade makes it harmonize with many gowns. This is the season of rich neutral and colored brocades—it is popular for capes and simple evening coats and we may have one—without feeling unduly extravagant, particularly as it does not have to be fur trimmed or even collared.

LOOKING AHEAD TO SOUTHERN FINERY.

By Eleanor Gunn.

Coats for Southern Wear Are Pastel Shaded and Broadcloth and Taffeta Are the Two Most Important Fabrics.

At this season, social activities make tremendous demands on our wardrobes and with one's thoughts on the shopping days before Christmas, it is not always easy to keep up.

Then there is that southern wardrobe! Not so long ago of one concentrated on white in planning it, one felt safe—but quite the opposite state of affairs now exists. One feels that in sticking to white she will pass unnoticed in the pastel-tinted throng, but to join it means watching all sorts of accessories, including shoes—yes, principally shoes. Dainty kid and suede and satin ones. It is predicted by many that brute varnished felts and even velours again pastel, will be worn at southern resorts. The way for the large hat was prepared by enormous hair ones last season, although it must be admitted they were a nuisance at the tea dances at which hour they appeared. Broad, simply trimmed and beautifully colored felts, sound attractive though besides which they are featuring shapes which argue for their success. There is also a feeling that heavy fibres will prove popular, since they lend themselves to simple types. Whether we go to the Riviera or Palm Beach there is always thrill in wearing what is being worn there!

Federal Aid for Road Building

Expenditures of Federal Funds on Roads in 1925 Discloses Great Benefits From Federal Aid to Populous Sections of the East as Well as to the Sparsely Settled Territory of the West.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 19.—Despite the sporadic agitation in some sections of the east against the Federal aid for road building, the Government road expenditures for the fiscal year 1925 reveals the fact that the New England, Middle Atlantic and East North Central States, which constitute 13.7 per cent of the land area of the country, received 28.2 per cent of the total financial help extended from the United States Treasury during the year.

This statement, which was broadcast by the American Automobile Association today, was based on an analysis of the figures for the year contained in the annual report of the Bureau of Public Roads.

"The report," says Thomas P. Henry, President of the A. A. A., "clearly proves that every state and every section of the country takes advantage of every cent available from Federal sources under the law and that there is not anywhere a demand for a let-down in Government Aid and participation.

"The figures on expenditures for this year should dispose once and for all of allegations to the effect that only the west is interested in the Federal Aid program. As a matter of fact, the report of the Bureau of Public Roads shows that the mountain and Pacific Coast States, which include 39.6 per cent of the total land area of the country, received only 18.8 per cent of the Federal Aid extended during the year.

"Another important feature of this annual accounting is to be found in the statements made by Secretary of Agriculture Jardine and by Thomas H. MacDonald, Chief of the Bureau of Public Roads, to the effect that the Government expenditures 'do not remotely approach the point of extravagance.'"

President Henry also called attention to the strong statement contained in the report of Secretary Jardine to President Coolidge on the extent to which the automobile owners of the country have footed the bill for the road building of the nation.

Secretary Jardine places the receipts of the Federal Excise Taxes on motor vehicles since 1918 at $800,000,000 as compared with $373,000,000 contributed to road building by the Federal Government.

"It may be seen," declares the Secretary, "that the Federal Aid highway expenditures have been far more than paid by owners of motor vehicles." He continued:

"The same motor vehicle owners contributed to the state treasuries in license fees and gasoline taxes during the last fiscal year more than sufficient funds to pay the state's share of the cost of Federal Aid roads in all states with the exception of New Mexico."

The President of the A. A. A. calls attention to the statement in the report of the Chief of the Bureau of Public Roads to the effect that Federal Aid is even more vital to the populous sections of the east than it is to the west and far west.

Chief MacDonald says in his report:

"The necessity for Federal participation in highway construction does not lie alone in the far west, nor even in the middle west and south. It is even more essential that a continuous and adequate system of highways be built in the more populous sections of the east.

"There is a totally erroneous impression that the roads in the east have generally been built. It is true that road improvement was begun in that section at an early date and many miles of road were built, but every mile of the original construction is being rebuilt to meet the requirements of the greatly increased traffic, and the Federal funds are as eagerly used in this section as in any other.

"The Eastern States have benefited to a marked degree by this Federal service for the very reason that their population is dense and that the nuumber of interstate roads is great. Especially in these states, it must be recognized, that the influence of the great focal centers of population can not be obstructed at State lines."

The seven states that received the largest individual share of Federal Aid during 1925 are as follows:

Texas	$5,136,128.53
New York	$4,813,177.91
Missouri	$4,208,311.64
Pennsylvania	$3,701,190.14
Michigan	$3,609,561.49
California	$3,246,816.24
Minnesota	$3,232,200.77

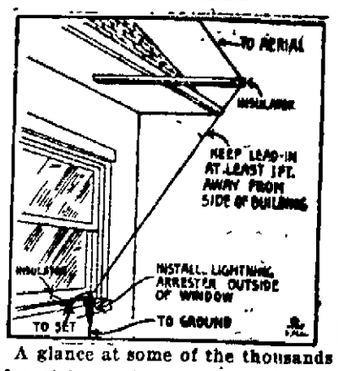
ANTENNA EFFICIENCY.

Position of Lead-in Very Important to Reduce Losses.

F. M. RUSSELL.



A glance at some of the thousands of aerials erected show the lead-in wires being brought down quite close to the sides of walls. Very often this reduces the efficiency of the aerial considerably owing to absorption or dialetic losses.

The efficiency of the aerial is governed largely by the distance which separates it from any earthed objects. For this reason we erect an aerial as high as possible. As explained in a previous article it is not sheer loftiness that counts. An aerial 40 feet above the ground and clear of all large objects is just as efficient as one erected 40 feet above the roof of a skyscraper. At least there is very little difference between the two. In other words it is the height the aerial projects into space and away from large earthed bodies that makes the aerial a good one.

The side of a building is an earthed body. In most brick buildings the walls are plastered and the plaster applied over steel lath. If your lead-in runs close to the wall, you are certain to lose by absorption a large amount of the E. M. F. induced in the aerial. By keeping the lead-in away as far as possible from the side of the wall you reduce these losses to the minimum.

No outside aerial is complete without a lightning arrester. If one is not used you run the risk of having every wire in you set burnt out during a thunderstorm. It is generally better to install the arrested outside. Be sure, however, that you use a type that is waterproof, so that there will be no danger of a short circuit during wet weather.

Individual Drinking Cup Is Profitable

Milk Flow Decreased by Lack of Water in Winter.

Many progressive dairymen have found from experience that the installation of individual drinking cups is a profitable investment for cutting labor and feed costs.

"It has been found," says E. A. Gaumit, assistant state dairy specialist in New Jersey, "that a 10 per cent increase in milk flow can be made by the addition of this equipment. A herd of 25 cows producing 400 quarts of milk under the old system would be expected to produce 440 quarts, or an extra can of milk, with the drinking cup.

"A Holstein cow producing 100 pounds of milk a day needs about 300 pounds of water. If turned out on a cold winter day, she will not drink enough ice-water to produce that amount of milk even if watered twice a day. Then, too, much of the feed she consumes is wasted in warming up her body again. With an individual automatic drinking cup installed in the barn she may drink little and often, and the water will not be ice cold. Hence, much heat energy is saved, which means a saving of feed. Furthermore, weather conditions do not affect her as acutely when it is no longer necessary to turn her out in a cold driving storm to get water.

"Drinking cups cut labor by saving labor. They make it unnecessary to turn the cows out and perhaps even drive them down to the pasture for water. It seems like poor economy to reduce the milk flow by failing to supply the dairy with plenty of pure water, which, with the exception of fresh air, is the only free ingredient essential for milk production."

Feeding Timothy Hay to Dairy Calves and Cows

Many breeders raise the question: "What kind of hay shall I feed calves?"

"This depends on several things," says C. P. Reader, assistant dairy husbandman at the New Jersey College of Agriculture, New Brunswick. Are you feeding the calves Guernsey or Jersey milk with grain? If so, clover or alfalfa hay would be likely to cause scours. In this case timothy or timothy and clover hay may be fed to good advantage. If skim milk and grain low in protein is being fed, either alfalfa or clover hay is satisfactory.

The value of timothy hay is often greatly overestimated as a feed for cattle. As a general rule it is unpalatable unless cut early. The most serious objection to it is its low protein content, which makes necessary the feeding of expensive concentrates.

It is sound economy to feed the high protein hays and balance the rest of the feed to suit the hay, except where only Guernsey or Jersey whole milk is available for calves.

Make your home worth $1500 more

Try to borrow money on a house that still relies on old-fashioned stoves for warmth. You'll be surprised at its low loan value. Install radiator heat. Then, ask your banker for a loan on the same property. Its value will have increased several hundred dollars—much more than the cost of the improvement.

Radiator heated houses are easier sold or rented because people appreciate comfortable, economical, clean and steady heat. Radiators save space in crowded rooms and are far safer; especially where children are.

Those who realize the desirability of radiator heat are gladly willing to secure it. Why not let us install it in your home: at far less cost than the increased property value would be?

Legion Post Holds Annual Meeting

y the efforts of the Americanism nd Education Committee. We en- red into that work this year for e first time by holding an essay ontest on "Flag Etiquette" among e public school children, awarding n American Flag to St. Peter's arochial School, the successful con- estants. The same contest will be arried on henceforth. Another ssay writing contest will be in- ugurated next year by the commit- e and two $5 gold pieces will be warded to the two students obtain- g the highest marks in American istory in the January regents ex- minations. The committee is also ndeavoring to have the Hon. James . Davis, Secretary of Labor, come Kingston and address a meeting honor of our newly made citizens. his is a public work and the way which the people outside our or- anization measure our good to the ommunity.

Welfare Work.

Your welfare work was well andled. A new work we entered nto was providing shoes and rubbers or any school child who needed hem, following the recommenda- ions of the truant officers of the ity schools. The necessity of this ork and the good it accomplished an be determined from our records hich are not quoted, but will be hown to anyone on demand, for in rue spirit of welfare and charity o names are mentioned. No needy elfare case was ever turned down, ven though the applicant was not a ember of the American Legion and ur records will prove that 95 per ent of the applicants were non- embers. I served as Relief Com- issioner for Ulster county of the tate Funds and found it necessary o give $661 to veterans who were ick and out of work during the ear, one veteran receiving $295 lone, so it has been well for the ost to be in cooperation with other nds whereby they could be relieved f some of their burden.

Membership.

With the well organized plan and he efforts of members of the 40 et 8 ociete the membership of the post xceed all previous records and we nish the year with 522 paid up mem- ers. To achieve this record it was ecessary to almost beg many to pay heir dues. It would never be hat way could we impress upon the eteran the good there is in the merican Legion Membership is the ne important part of our work, it is ur foundation for without members e cannot do justice to ourselves or thers. This year we enrolled 95 new embers. While 73 of our 1924 embers did not pay their dues this ear. We should bend every effort he coming year to get back to the old every veteran who was once on our books and those who never were. f we can accomplish that feat, we will have a membership to be proud of and with few equals in the State of New York. The morale of our mem- ber was of the highest and I know of practically no dissatisfaction Dur- ng the year we lost six members hrough death, namely Louis De La Vergne, Ray Rundel, J. Kenneth Sul- van, George Keyser, Jesse Williams nd Howard R. Sherman.

Post Activities.

Internal post activities was sort of rphaned during the year on account of our building program, but the Post ctivities Committee can say our new home represents part of the work of his committee.

The Victory Ball was a success, fi- nancially and socially. Creditable men- tion is due to Vice Commander Jacob for the decorations of the armory for the affair. Also to his credit is the fact that the Legion float was award- ed first prize in the float parade of the Farm and Home Bureau.

On Memorial Day we decorated with American flags and flowers the graves of veterans of the World War, member and non-member alike To defray this expense the county of Ul ster appropriated $75 and the city of Kingston $100. The same appropria- tions have been asked for 1926 and have been granted On Memorial Day we placed a wreath on the Roll o fHonor Tablet and flowers on the trees on the High School lawn in honor of the High School students who gave their lives in the World War. On Armistice Day we again placed a wreath on the Roll of Honor Tablet.

Service Officer.

Your Service Officer was on his job and found considerable work to do. Every now and then one of your comrades is taken sick and before long finds himself a total disability and his only recourse is to apply for compensation, believing his disability is due to his service. Some are suc- cessful in proving their claims, oth- ers are not, still the same routine and work is required. This form of work will continue for some time yet and will gradually diminish or develop along new lines.

Our Own Number.

Our Own Number was edited in a manner and form by Comrade An- drew J. Murphy, Jr., that showered praise after praise upon your post. There were a large number apply- ing for their adjusted service certi- ficates and I would urge anyone who has not yet made application to do so immediately, for we have had concrete evidence in our own circle that life is uncertain. In the one instance death took from us a mem- ber before he had completed his ap- plication and the neglect works hard- ship upon his next of kin. In an- other case application was made only seven days before death and the burden on the next of kin was relieved.

Let us now draw to your attention the fact that you—in good health—can reinstate your government insur- ance by payment of only two months' premiums. Gentlemen, there is no better, no more secure life insur- ance policy than that of the gov- ernment and I would urge all who have dropped their insurance to pick it up before July 2nd, 1926—after which date it will be lost to you for- ever. It is better for you to provide for yourself for twenty years from to- day and for your next of kin, should you die before that time, than have them make application to your Wel- fare Officer, even though he is al- ways ready to receive them and will- ling to assist them

The Building Committee has functioned honestly and sincerely and the fruits of their endeavors is now the monument of bricks and steel and stone and wood on West O'Reilly street in the form of the American Legion Memorial Building, which was only a dream a year ago. The treasurer of the committee will ren- der a report of the finances of the committee so I will not touch that part of the work. Under the leader- ship of John D Schoonmaker and Sam Watts, of the citizens commit- tee, the public appeal for funds was successfully put over. In June the excavation for the foundation was completed by the B M. S. Transpor- tation Company, Inc., at a cost of $966 62 The contract for the gen- eral work was awarded to the Mi- chaud-Campbell Company, Inc., for $17,472. The plumbing contract went to the L F. Bannon Company for $3,533. The electrical work was awarded to Joseph A McNeils Com- pany for $412 The painting con- tract to George C DuBois & Sons for $440. Kenneth Everett furnished the hardware at a cost of $209 32. The marble for the tablet was furnished by the McLaury Marble Corporation of New York city at a cost of $489. while the Gorham Company was awarded the contract for the memor ial tablet at a cost of $1,190 Joseph Block was awarded the contract to furnish the shades in the building and the furniture was purchased from Stock & Cordts, Wesley Gree- ory, Gregory & Company, Mrs S. L Torrey, Rose Gorman Rose and Louis Kaplan

The building is now practically completed and will be ready for the the dedication and public opening in January, which plans will be more definitely announced by the committee at an early date

The committee were obliged to be in constant attendance at the build- ing during the course of construc- tion and have held weekly meetings since June, so you can appreciate what it has taken in time and money to give you what you have.

Never let us forget our friend and comrade in arms, Charles S. Keefe, the designer and architect of the building. His serves in their en- tirety have been rendered without charges therefor. H. S. Myers, the superintendent in charge of the work, is entitled to special mention He has ben on the job every day and you can rest assured that the speci- fications have been followed to the letter and to the satisfaction of the architect.

Under a state law we are free from all city taxes and the board of water supply has exempted us from water taxes.

I have attempted to uncover some of our activities during the past year for the enlightenment for those who have not yet found it practicable or interesting to become an active part of Kingston Post, to attend its meet- ings and assist in its work. I have only hit the high spots, but there- from you can judge that the service of the post for our mutual benefit and that of the community has been well rendered by those in command

In closing I want to say that Com- mander Potter is deserving of your highest praise and of your choicest words for the manner in which he lead the Post to victory in all its at- tainments He has been a faithful and loyal worker, holding high the standard of the post. He has achieved an enviable record as com- mander and one almost impossible to be equalled by his successors. He extended to me as adjutant every possible courtesy and I desire at this time, before you gentlemen, to ex- tend to him my personal regards and esteem.

Respectfully submitted
EUGENE B CAREY.
Adjutant.

Stormy Petrel Fights On with Clipped Wings

COL WILLIAM MITCHELL/ NEA

Col Mitchell, who received a nation's proud honors for a glorious war record, has been shorn of rank and pay by the generals he denounced. At the extreme left we see him as an aviator and commander of all our flyers in France. Next, as a general, he passed on all bombs to be rained on the foe. Then he is shown as he came home from the fighting front and was cut to the rank of colonel. And at the extreme right he appears with some of the decorations bestowed upon him as a real fighting man.

Why do so many women drive The OAKLAND SIX?

Women choose the new Oakland Six in preference to all other cars in its price class, not only because it is more beautiful and comfortable, but also because it is safer and easier to drive.

Threading through traffic in this car is a joy rather than a task. Steering and gear-shifting are pleasingly free from effort. Oak- land's proven Four-Wheel Brakes respond to incredibly slight pressure. Night driving is made simpler and safer by the con- venient dimmer on steering wheel.

All of these features combine to make the Oakland Six the favored car among women, just as its outstanding mechanical advantages, including Air Cleaner, Oil Filter, Full Pressure Oiling and The Harmonic Balancer—and new prices $70 to $350 lower —make it the preferred car among men

Test Trip of S-19 Successful

New London, Conn., Dec. 19—"Entirely successful" was the test trip made by the submarine S-19 out of this port yesterday afternoon, following her overhauling, according to a statement isued today at the United States submarine base here. The S-19 made two dives to a depth of 200 fet each and so accomplished what her crew were ordered to do by their superiors at Washington.

The S-19 recently went ashore and was sent here to be overhauled and have her damage repaired. The test undertaken yesterday was to determine whether the vessel was again fit for duty.

The S-19 is constructed so as to be able to dive to a depth of 210 feet, a depth seldom attempted by any submarine and the mark reached in the test is considered unusually good

10 Injured When Train Derails

Engineer, Fireman and Two Passengers Are Seriously Injured and Six Others Bruised When Pennsylvania Train Derails.

Gillitzin, Pa., Dec. 19.—Engineer Albert S. Pyle, Fireman H. G. Paschell and two passengers were injured seriously and six other passengers sustained cuts and bruises early today when a Pennsylvania railroad train No. 32, running between Pittsburgh and Philadelphia, was derailed between Gillitzin and Cresson, Pa.

All units of the train, comprising the locomotive, three Pullman cars, two passenger coaches, two express cars and a combination car, left the rails when the train, pushing its way over the peak of the Allegheny mountains, before dawn, ran into an obstruction, as yet unknown to company officials.

Two locomotives turned over, but all other units of the train remained upright. In leaving the rails the locomotive toppled over onto the three adjoining main line tracks of the Pennsylvania road blocking traffic from all directions.

The list of injured:

Albert S. Pyle, 45.

Harry Paschell, 33, fireman.

Ben Hess, 39, chest punctured.

John Sprayer, 59.

William Blark, 21.

The Rev. Victor Joseph, 34, negro.

Myron C. Pointer, 37.

Max Schram, 19.

John Freeman, 21.

John Blungs, 48, eight ribs fractured.

All the injured passengers were rushed to the Altoona Hospital.

While wrecking crews from Altoona and Pittsburgh cleaned debris from the four main line tracks all main line trains were routed over other roads.

Pennsylvania road officials from Pittsburgh started an investigation of accident.

Financial and Commercial

New York, Dec. 19.—Neither the railroad nor the oil stocks appeared to be in position to resume today the vigorous advance which featured them in the earlier sessions of the week. A considerable volume of oil and railroad stocks was bought to market on profit taking in the first hour but buying demand was also liberal and price changes were therefore narrow. Erie, Pere Marquette, and other of the merger stocks moved downward a point or less while New Haven, New York Central and other leaders in this week's notable rally were conspicuous for their absence.

The public utility and specialty stocks led the way to slightly higher prices in the second hour. Postum Cereal moved up four points to 104½ and Brooklyn Manhattan Transit advanced two points. American Can spurted about five points and Consolidated Gas sold near the high of the week. Murray Body continued to improve and reached 15⅞.

Pressure on the motor shares in the second period also turned the trend of prices downward and the reactionary tone gradually spread to the whole list.

Postum Cereal was a feature advancing eight points to 108 and completing a gain of 17 points since yesterday. The bulk of railroad, oil and industrial stocks, however, closed the day in the same reactionary condition as the opening of the session.

Railroad and liberty bonds constituted the most active group in the listed bond market today. The rails were slightly reactionary.

French government 7's recovered fractionally to 88½; Italian New 7's sold in good volume at 94½; German 7's at 101½; Polish 8's at 87; Mexican 4's small or '04 at 26⅝; Liberty first 3¼ sold at 99.22.

Industrial bonds were inactive but steady, with good demand for the telephone and power company issues. Convertible Oil bonds were slightly reactionary and copper bonds firm.

LOCAL DEATH RECORD.

Recent Deaths and Funerals of Persons in This Vicinity.

The funeral of Emma Hopper, wife of Elmer E. Deyo, was held at 9:30 o'clock this morning from her late home, 136 Second avenue, and at 10 o'clock at the Church of the Holy Cross where a Mass of requiem was offered for the repose of her soul by the Rev. Gregory Mabry. Sir John Martin's Mass in A minor was celebrated. A quartet, composed of Josephine Helsmoortel, Herman La Tour, Edith Mayer and Harry Clearwater, under the direction of Walter J. Kidd, Jr., rendered very effectively the musical program. During the offertory, "Love Divine" was very feelingly rendered by Miss Helsmoortel and Mr. La Tour. At the conclusion of the Mass the Rev. Father Mabry departed from the usual custom of the church and paid a glowing tribute to the true Christian character and religious fervor of the deceased. The pallbearers were Henry Hopper, Henry Hopper, Jr., Irving Deyo, Elmer E. Hopper, George Mays and James Cramer. Seated in the chancel during the services was the Rev. R. Stewart Burke. The Rev. Father Burke accompanied the funeral cortege to Wiltwyck Cemetery, where the committal services were conducted and the remains interred in the family plot.

Highway Material Tests Being Made at College

At the request of the state highway commission, a small temporary wooden barracks has been built behind the Engineering building of the University of Wisconsin to be used as a highway testing laboratory. Tests of various highway materials are now being carried out by the university and the commission.

Samples of road material are tested in the laboratory for straight compression and for cross binding strength. Some of the tests are made on roads under construction in order that the mixture may be of the proper consistency. The sample is put in a frame along the edge of the road and then tested on the roadbeds. The result is later examined in the laboratory.

Roadbed samples are also tested during regular intervals of varied periods of days or weeks, and some are put away to be tested after a year or two.

Good Road Notes

Experiments are being conducted by the Illinois state highway department to determine what is the best grass mixture to grow along the shoulders of the state aid roads. Several different mixtures have been worked out, and a number of experimental strips several hundred feet long are being seeded for study and observation.

Seven and one-half million dollars will be spent on roads in national parks during the next three years, Steven Mather, director of national parks for the United States government, told members of the Motor Car Dealers' association of Los Angeles. A comprehensive picture of national park development was drawn by Mather and his assistant, A. E. Demaray, for the automobile men.

The real good that a good roads movement can do will never be realized to the full until China has been persuaded to accept the idea.

Road improvements in 16 states of the South will cost $40,000,000 this year. North Carolina is developing one of the finest highways in the country—a hard-surfaced road running from Wilson to Jacksonville, a distance of 165 miles. When completed, this highway will be the longest asphalt road east of the Rocky mountains.

Queer Customs

The Zipas, chiefs of the Chibcha Indians, Colombia, were governed by singular rules. Each Zipa was the son of his predecessor's sister, was reared under special guardianship and was forbidden to see the sun or eat salt.

ORCHARD GLEANINGS

PRUNE FRUIT TREES AND GRAPE VINES

All of the trees should have the roots carefully pruned before planting. All broken and bruised roots should be removed, and any roots that are unusually long should be cut back so as to avoid doubling or bending back of the roots. Immediately after fruit trees are planted the tops should be cut back. The amount to be removed from the different kinds of trees will depend upon the kind of fruit as well as the size of the trees. So says Prof. C. C. Newman, chief of the horticultural division.

A one-year-old apple tree should be cut back to about two and a half feet from the ground. A two-year-old apple tree should be well branched about two to two and a half feet from the ground. Remove all but three to five lateral branches close to the body of the tree. Those that are left to form the scaffold limbs should be cut back to from six to ten inches, care being taken to prune to outside buds, in order that the limbs may grow in the proper direction.

June bud peach trees are usually 24 to 36 inches in height when received from the nursery. These should be cut back to within 18 inches to 2 feet of the ground. A one-year-old peach tree should be cut back in the same way as June-budded trees. There is no necessity for leaving the lateral branches. As a rule a one-year-old peach tree is headed too high to allow the lateral branches to remain for permanent heads.

The plum should be pruned in the same way as the peach. Pears should be pruned in the same way as the apple. If the fig is to be pruned to bush form, it should be cut back to within six inches of the ground after transplanting. If it is to be grown in low tree form then it should be headed back two feet from the ground.

Bunch grapes and scuppernongs should be cut back within three to four inches of the ground immediately after transplanting. Raspberries and blackberries should be cut back to within three to four inches of the ground immediately after transplanting.

Profitable Orchard on Every Farm for Health

Some maintain that since this is a day of specialization we should not encourage the planting and care of home orchards, the thought being that home orchard production may lessen the sales of the commercial fruit grower and that he should be allowed to supply the needs of the community. Some also believe that the general farmer cannot raise good fruit. As a matter of fact this reasoning does not work out in practice. It is true too often that the farmer who fails to grow his apples and other fruits either neglects to buy or is unable to do so and the fruit needed for the family is not available. All have heard this remark: "I can buy the fruit for my family cheaper than I can grow it." As a rule this is just an excuse for not raising fruit and in practically every instance the family goes without fruit most of the year. With a profitable home orchard on every farm our rural population will not only be healthier and happier, but a large percentage of the people will become fruit eaters. The demand, in the long run, for apples and other fruits will be greatly increased and the commercial fruit grower and the home orchardist should be benefited.

Fowls Relish Green Stuff

If you are so situated that your fowls do not get as much green stuff as you would like them to have, get a bag of good green alfalfa or clover meal and scald it well with boiling water, letting it cool off to a certain extent and then putting it out for the chickens in small troughs. They will relish it amazingly. Salt it very slightly, too, which makes it more appetizing.

Horticulture Facts

Wrapping apples prolongs their keeping qualities.

Piling up the fruit in the orchard results in ripening it up prematurely and hastening decay.

If there is a furnace in the cellar it is almost impossible to keep apples after fire is started in fall.

When rye is sown in the fall to be plowed under in the spring it is well not to let it stand too late in the spring.

The first summer or cluster bud spray for apples is made mainly for the control of apple scab, canker worm, and plum curculio.

Apples are ready to pick when a few specimens which are entirely free from disease and insect injury begin to drop naturally from the tree.

There are two common borers that work in mountain ash trees, namely, the round-headed apple-tree borer and the flat-headed borer. Each one of these borers is difficult to control.

Christmas Cheer At Saugerties

The less fortunate people of the village of Saugerties will be taken care of this Christmas. The Ministerial Association of Saugerties held a meeting Thursday afternoon at which it was decided to expend the funds in the association's treasury to provide Christmas baskets for the needy. The association will also make an appeal to the community at large for cooperation to increase the funds.

A solicitor was appointed to represent each church in the village. The list of solicitors is as follows: Miss Loren Sickler, Baptist Church; Mrs. Mabel Molineaux, Congregational Church; Mrs. John T. Washburn, Episcopal Church; Mrs. Hannah Washburn, Reformed Church; Mrs. Samuel Millins, Methodist Church.

Flyer Recovers From Injuries

Kingston, Mass., Dec. 19.—Lieutenant Fred H. Decker, navy flyer, who started after an altitude record from Mitchell Field, Long Island, who was blown 175 miles to sea and who fought his way back, today was recovering from the effects of a swollen face and hands.

Coming down here, Decker tied his plane to an apple tree and sought shelter in a local farmhouse. Decker, who was lost for six hours, was up five miles when he ran into the gale that sent him seaward.

Later Lieutenant Decker was taken to Jordon Hospital, Plymouth. He will be confined to a hospital bed for three days. Another aviator came from Long Island to take back the plane.

Sally's Letter To Santa Claus

Dear Santa Claus:

There is an awful nice place in Kingston called "The Home for the Aged," and I go there sometimes with my grandma to visit a friend of hers. Maybe you don't know about it, and I guess they would'nt write you a letter the way we kids do. But, do you know, dear Santa Claus, those nice old ladies are an awful lot like us kids, 'ceptin' they can't chase around the way we do, and when they get awful lonesome they cry sometimes. Honest. Well, most of 'em aren't counting much on this Christmas, I guess, but are making believe that Christmases they have had make 'em happy now, and I guess you'll think, same as I do, that that's terribly lonesome. That's why I am writing this letter. Please, Santa Claus, won't you take just a little bit of extra time and stop there at 95 Green street and sprise them with some little presents, the kind grown-up girls like? Please, and if you are in an awful hurry you needn't stop quite so long at my house. Just to help you out, I know something they all want a lot. It would sound like a funny Christmas present, but it's nice to have some funny ones. They want potatoes! What do you think of that?

Please! Please!! Please!!! Dear Santa Claus, and a very Merry Christmas to you.

From your loving friend,

SALLY MORE.

Knowing and Doing

Between the knowing and the doing there is a deep gulf. Into that abyss the happiness of many a man slips, and is lost. There is no peace, no real and lasting felicity, for a human life until the gulf is closed, and the continent of conduct meets the continent of creed, edge to edge, lip to lip, firmly joined forever.—Henry Van Dyke.

Refreshing

A Chicago man has invented a machine for making ice cream without using ice. Thus the simple operation is rendered complete. Several years ago numerous manufacturers learned that ice cream could be made without using cream, and now with this newest invention all one has to do to get some ice cream is to get it.—Exchange.

BAKED HAM IS FINE FOR HOLIDAY DINNER

Properly Cooked Ham Is Easy to Slice.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Well-baked ham is one of the most attractive meats that can be served on the family table. It is appropriate for any of the holiday occasions when an especially good dinner is in order, for it not only looks delicious, but has an appetizing fragrance developed from the brown sugar and whole cloves used on its surface during baking, and an incomparable flavor due to this seasoning and the method of cooking. At old-fashioned Thanksgiving dinners it was not unusual to see a baked ham at one end of the table and a roast turkey at the other; the flavor of the two meats seem to blend well.

Ham is generally baked after a preliminary boiling to make it tender and shorten the length of time it remains in the oven, but with care a moist, tender ham may be baked from the start. In most cases, however, a combination of boiling and baking is preferred. If the ham is at all dry or very salty it should be soaked in cold water for several hours before being put on to cook.

For ordinary family use, even with several guests, a ten-pound ham will be found convenient. The United States Department of Agriculture gives the following directions for cooking a ham of this size:

Wash the ham thoroughly and trim off any mold or loose pieces. Soak over night if the ham is unusually dry or salty. Otherwise, put directly into cold water with a teaspoon and a half of pickling spice, three slices each of carrot and onion, a stalk of celery, half a teaspoonful of celery salt, a sprig of parsley, and a quarter of a cupful of strong vinegar. Bring to a boil and cook just below the boiling point four hours, or until it is tender when pierced with a long-tined fork. The meat should be somewhat shrunk from the bone, but the ham should not be overcooked or it will be difficult to carve. The time of cooking varies greatly with the shape of the ham, its age, and the kind of cure.

To bake a ham that has been boiled first, remove the skin and cover it with the following paste: One cupful of brown sugar, one cupful of fine, soft bread crumbs, one teaspoonful of mustard, and enough vinegar or cider to hold the paste together. Stick the ham with whole cloves and bake for 30 to 60 minutes, basting with one cupful of water mixed with one-fourth cupful of vinegar or cider and two tablespoonfuls of brown sugar.

Good results may also be obtained by cooking the ham in a fireless cooker until tender, and then preparing it for serving in the same way as ham cooked directly on the stove.

After the first festive serving of the ham, it may appear in many forms on the table, and if alternated with other meats, it need not become monotonous. Pieces that cannot be sliced may be put through the food chopper and used for sandwiches, hashes, creamed dishes, omelets, and in other ways. The ground ham, if covered with a layer of rendered ham fat, will keep in the refrigerator for several weeks.

Even when there is no special occasion for serving a whole ham, the ten-pound size will be found economical. The amount of meat in proportion to bone and fat is satisfactory, almost all the meat will cut into attractive slices, and if properly stored, the cooked meat will keep well. The entire ham may be cooked at one time, or it may be cut in half, and each half be cooked separately. The uncooked piece should be carefully wrapped in waxed paper and stored in a cool, but not too cold place, preferably hanging where air circulates around it. Sometimes a butcher is willing to cut a ham and sell one-half at a time. Smaller hams may be found on the market, but the texture of the meat is not so good nor the cuts so satisfactory as in the medium-sized hams.

GOOD DOUGHNUTS ARE RARE TREAT

Tender Cakes Are Useful for Various Occasions.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Any mother who has ever let a boy of twelve or fourteen try his hand at frying doughnuts, knows the possibilities of this occupation as an alternative to a candy pull. Most boys like some kinds of cooking, and all boys like doughnuts. Making doughnuts appeals because it promises worth-while results. Next time the boy scouts—or the girl scouts, for that matter—want "something different" to do for a social hour, let them make doughnuts. Divide them into squads of four—two to roll and cut out, and two to fry. Use two frying kettles if possible. If there are more young people in the group let them play games and take their turns later. Four is about all the average kitchen will accommodate comfortably at one time. Of course part of the fun comes afterward when the doughnuts are passed, with cider or hot cocoa, and the surplus is decided to be taken home. The dough that was cut from the centers may be cooked with the doughnuts to satisfy the natural desire for "just a little taste" as the frying goes on.

Good tender doughnuts, freshly made, are useful for innumerable occasions where simple refreshments are called for. At church specialties and other community gatherings something inexpensive but popular is usually served and doughnuts, with a beverage of some sort, answer this need admirably. When a chance caller comes during the late afternoon, doughnuts with coffee are much appreciated. After the evening "foursome" at cards, doughnuts and a fruit drink are appropriate. All the doughnuts permitted at lunch or suppertime will of course be eaten by the family, and this form of sweet seems especially to meet the fuel needs of big hungry boys who are growing fast and using their muscles a great deal for athletics or heavy out-of-doors work.

The United States Department of Agriculture gives the recipe below for making doughnuts. The ingredients given make about forty.

Doughnuts.

1 cupful milk	1 cupful sugar
4½ cupfuls sifted soft-wheat flour	2 teaspoonfuls salt
5 teaspoonfuls baking powder	½ teaspoonful cinnamon
2 teaspoonfuls fat	½ teaspoonful nutmeg
2 eggs

Let the Young People Make Doughnuts.

Place the fat in a warm place until it becomes soft though not melted, so that it may be combined easily with the sugar. Stir in the beaten egg yolks and add alternately the dry ingredients, which have been mixed and sifted together and the milk. Add only a small quantity of liquid at the start. Add the flavoring and fold in the well beaten egg whites last. Roll out the dough about one-third inch thick with as little handling as possible. Cut out the doughnuts and fry in deep fat, hot enough (365 degrees Fahrenheit) to make a doughnut rise to the surface quickly and to brown each side in about one minute. Drain on brown paper. When the dough may be rolled in pulverized sugar.

One of the secrets of success in making doughnuts is the use of a plain mixture such as the above. A rich dough tends to absorb too much fat in frying. The dough should be rolled smooth and not too thin, for a rough surface allows more fat to cook in the doughnut than the more compact through to the sugar coating inside. If the fat is not hot enough the doughnuts will be greasy. Doughnuts can be forced under the fat to make them brown evenly and quickly by pushing a wire frying basket down on them.

Scalloped Cabbage and Cheese

Wash a medium-sized cabbage thoroughly, cut it into boiling salted water and cook for 20 or 30 minutes. Drain it. Make a cup of white sauce, season with salt and pepper and stir into it two-thirds of a cupful of grated cheese. In a greased baking dish place alternate layers of the cabbage and sauce, cover the top with bread crumbs that have been combined with a little melted butter or other fat, and bake until the crumbs are browned.

Late Fall Flower

The last fall flower is the horse tail, so-called because of the stem's resemblance to the switch hand of a horse. It is sometimes called "the frost flower." It looks like an ice crystal in shape and color and can be found low on the ground among the brown stubble. This sturdy blossom is not in the least like the fragile summer flower of the witch hazel. It never grows to more than three inches in height as most ordinarily be caught before it is found.—Grit.

Kaplan Defeated Herman Handily

Feather Champion Takes Twelve of Fifteen Rounds From Babe Herman—Kaplan in Wonderful Condition Won In Easy Fashion.

New York, Dec. 19.—Louis (Kid) Kaplan, featherweight champion, easily outpointed Babe Herman, challenger from California, in their seventh meeting last night. It wasn't even close. Kaplan simply bulldozed the challenger out of any idea he may have had of winning the championship

Kaplan kept his man off balance through the greater part of fifteen rounds by beating him to the punch. He led from the opening bell and carried the pace to Herman all the way. He was just a little bit too strong for the challenger who being a smart young man, realized this fact at the earliest moment and conducted himself accordingly

Herman, as a challenger, was a very second rate proposition. He was supposed to have something on Kaplan, but last night the business went along. Kaplan, in wonderful condition, bounced out of his corner and proceeded to slap the challenger silly at the opening bell He kept on doing it for the remainder of the fifteen rounds

The fight substantiated more or less Kaplan's assertion that he was a sick man in their previous meeting at Waterbury, Conn., when the champion was badly beaten by the Californian, although the judges decided otherwise

Although Herman slowed up noticeably toward the end of the fight, he was at no time in danger, as Kaplan's blows lacked knockout force. The Californian landed many clean wallops but never had the champion worried

Kaplan carried the fighting through the first six rounds, winning them easily He excelled Herman both at in-fighting and exchanging wallops at long range.

Herman's big chance came in the tenth session, but he failed to take advantage of it. Two hard rights to the jaw staggered the champion, whose knees sagged The Californian landed a terrific barrage of rights and lefts to Kaplan's jaw, but the champion weathered the storm and floored the challenger with a right to the jaw as the round ended.

Herman staged another rally in the fourteenth, but Kaplan again staved him off and came back with another strong counter attack.

Kaplan won twelve of the fifteen rounds. The seventh was even and Herman took the tenth and fourteenth.

The fight kept a crowd of 16,000 on edge, as Herman's rallies raised the possibility of a knockout. The seventh round was the only dull chapter of the evening.

In the semi-final Honeyboy Finnegan, Boston featherweight, won from Bobby Garcia of Baltimore in the sixth round. Garcia was repeatedly warned against hitting low and was finally disqualified.

Catcher's Bow as Run Scored Proved Costly

Frank Bancroft, late business manager of the Cincinnati Reds, while manager of the famous Providence Grays, was experimenting with a young catcher of no mean ability.

While catching a game one day, the score a tie in the twelfth inning, the young catcher ran far back to the right of the grand stand and made a phenomenal catch of a foul fly. The audience, naturally appreciating the catch, began to applaud and shout for the young man He at once turned to the stand and, removing his mask and glove, made several elaborate bows in appreciation of their plaudits

In the meantime the man on third base, seeing him bowing and scraping to the audience, broke for home and won the game

On returning to the clubhouse after the game, Bancroft gave the young catcher a tongue lashing for noticing the audience and letting the man score. The young fellow, nervous and excited, admitted to Bancroft he was a "little off" in the play

"Yes, and you'll be further off tomorrow"

The catcher left the club that night

Determining Length of Game by the Stop Watch

While there are one or two who have expressed themselves as not in favor of changing from the old system of determining the length of a game by the stop watch to the number of plays, it is interesting to note that the spectators and coaches who were in attendance at the Brown-Boston game at Providence when the "play system" was given its first trial are loud in their praise of the experiment and favor its continuance Coach Charles L Whelan liked it so much that he wants it adopted for future Boston university games Like the numbering of the players it is going to take considerable time to show whether it will be universally adopted or not; but those who are advocating it and those who have seen it tried believe that it will be a part of the rules of the game some day.

NEW BOXING RULE HELPS CLEAR RING

Seconds Must Leave Arena Ten Seconds Before Start of New Round.

The rule, under the boxing commissioners of New York and the rest of the country, which calls for seconds to get out of the ring ten seconds before the gong announcing a new round, is having an excellent effect in speeding up bouts

The old towel slinger has disappeared from metropolitan rings. There used to be two of them in action, bumping elbows in their struggles to get the towels untangled and into actionable form. The scramble of these men, along with seconds, to get out of the ring often cut short the rounds.

Under the present system a whistle or bell calls attention to the time for the seconds to hop out of the ring. The boxer sits up, takes a deep breath and sinks back to await the bell. It is the system for limited round bouts. It is religiously adhered to through the 12-round and other bouts lest by their neglect the boxer faces disqualification.

These rules, which shoved the Marquis of Queensberry code into the background 25 years ago, were codified by a meeting of about 20 veterans of the ring and were written into the Walker law As a result the system has gradually spread over the country until nearly all bouts are conducted under the same conditions except that in some places the referee still holds the center of the ring without assistance of judges in making decisions.

The Queensberry rules called for a boxer to protect himself in the clinches. The modern code calls for a clean break on clinches, upon the referee calling for it. Firpo stretched his arms out on being ordered to break against Harry Wills and was knocked down for his pains Harry Wills against Floyd Johnson, in the early part of their fight, stretched out his arms as Firpo had done, but with his shoulders bent in against Johnson so the latter would have difficulty in reaching his chin if so inclined.

Johnson let go with one hand but held with the other and clubbed at Wills' head as best he could and was knocked out for his pains.

In New York and probably elsewhere the rule of hitting in clinches is not acceptable to the fighters and the boxers so offending are not disqualified by the referee.

Ty Cobb Equals Another Big Loop Batting Mark

Finishing the 1925 baseball season with a mark of .380, Ty Cobb, manager of the Detroit Tigers, equaled one of the few major league batting records that he had not previously held or shared. The Georgian's mark this year made the twentieth season in which he has batted better than .300, the only other player in the major leagues to have accomplished that being the late Adrian C. Anson.

There is a difference in the records of the two sluggers, however, which favors Cobb in comparison. The Detroit manager has made his string of 300 marks, which include three seasons above .400, in consecutive years, while Anson dropped out of the select circle two seasons.

Cobb began his .300 hitting in 1906 with a mark of .320. Anson began in 1876, ten years before Cobb was born, and continued as a .300 hitter for four years, or through the 1900 season. He dropped out of the so-called heavy hitting class in 1901 and 1902 and then resumed in 1903, ending his string in 1897 with a mark of .302.

Pacific Coast Players Cost Pirates $100,000

Paul Waner and Hal Rhyne, two Pacific coast players cost Barney Dreyfus, owner of the world champion Pittsburgh club, $100,000 and several players to be cut loose next spring. They were both members of the San Francisco club, which won the Pacific Coast league pennant this season. Scouts from nearly all of the clubs from both major leagues were camping on the trail of the Frisco club all season while dickering for the players. The deal offered by Dreyfus ended all arguments. The new players will report to the Pirates next spring.

Ellenville Beat Kingston Five

Rally In Closing Minutes Gives Ellenville Game Over Locals, 17 to 15—Traphagen Led Scorers With But Seven Points.

Having the battle practically won and stored away in their satchels with a six point lead on their opponents and nine minutes to play, the Kingston outfit let the Ellenville aggregation slip past them in the final moments of the combat and take possession of the desperately contested struggle by a 17 to 15 score, Friday evening in Ellenville. The Ellenville outfit made its spectacular finish by virtue of the penalty strip. In these last minutes of play the Ellenville team took advantage of seven fouls in a row being called on the locals, making good five of this number and then starting ahead on a short spurt which awarded them the battle.

It was one of the the tightest affairs ever waged on the Ellenville court. Neither team could shake its opponent in the first half, the period ending with the score six all.

Both teams scored mostly from the foul line as each made but three field goals Johnson, Bruck and Dolson each managed to sink a field apiece for the locals.

Traphagen was the main scorer of the evening with seven markers. The Ellenville forward's keen eye when performing from the penalty strip was a strong asset to his team. The little forward made good five out of seven shots from the fifteen foot line. Traphagen also made one of his team's doubles while Taylor came across with the other two.
